PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The public schools of the City of Oakland are under the management of an efficient Board of Directors, and Superintendent Frederick M. Campbell, who was re-elected in March, 1878, for the third time to fill this important post. The schools are all in a high state of discipline.

The increase of the juvenile population of Oakland during the year 1877 is attested by the erection of three capacious buildings for the accommodation of pupils. These are the Tompkins School House, cost $14,400; Cole School House, cost $23,300; Lincoln Primary, cost $3,300.

The present school buildings may be classed as follows: one sixteen-room building, one twelve-room building, five eight-room buildings, three four-room buildings, three three-room buildings, besides one fourteen-room building in course of erection.

The expenses of the department for the year 1877 were as follows: salaries of teachers, $41,495.34; salaries of janitors, superintendent, etc., $9,527.03; light, water, rents, and interest, $4,169.55; furniture, $3,207.28; books and supplies, $1,822.86; fuel, $1,285.85; real estate
