PREFACE

A comparison of the Vital Records for 1856 with those of today reveals that the standardized form of today did not belong to the early period. Today punctuation, the use of capitals, the meticulous recording of the date and the place of residence follow a definite form. Only in our death records is there a lingering note still of that interest in the individual that the old records so abundantly convey. Such informality in the records inevitably suggest that the style is "quaint". Quaint indeed seems a birth reading, "to the lady of John Brown of a Son," son "or the birth "of female twins". ----

In a larger sense, they record the beginnings of the new American city on the then remote western coast, and as such, they furnish us with invaluable historical source material. We follow the life of the port in records that show close contact with Hawaii and the outer Pacific even in that early day. The famous whaling industry, still in the hey-day of its prosperity, lives again for us in such a record as that of Captain Almy, "for many years Master in the whaling service." Or in that of the New Bedford sailor of the whale-ship "Nauticon", etc. In contrast and equally important are records showing the young pioneer city as the focal point of interest for the interior from Utah to the Coast and from Washington Territory to Baja California.

The records show that the health of the city suffered appalling ravages from pulmonary troubles, and its high infant mortality is revealed in such records as those of the death of the three young children of a Sonoma pastor within five days, and there is many a similar one. On the other hand, the vigorous growth of the city is shown when its residential areas advance from such water-front locations as No. 5 Jackson St. to Third and Mission and on to McAllister and Jones Sts.

There is always the fascination of the vivid personalities of the period----James King of Wm. and Thomas Starr King are the editors in that momentous year of 1856. There are such records as that of Mrs. Hubbs, daughter of Captain Hedelius, who was with John Paul Jones, and one of the survivors of the "Bon Homme Richard." Along still another line, we may study from the records the complex racial elements that are making up the life of a new commonwealth.

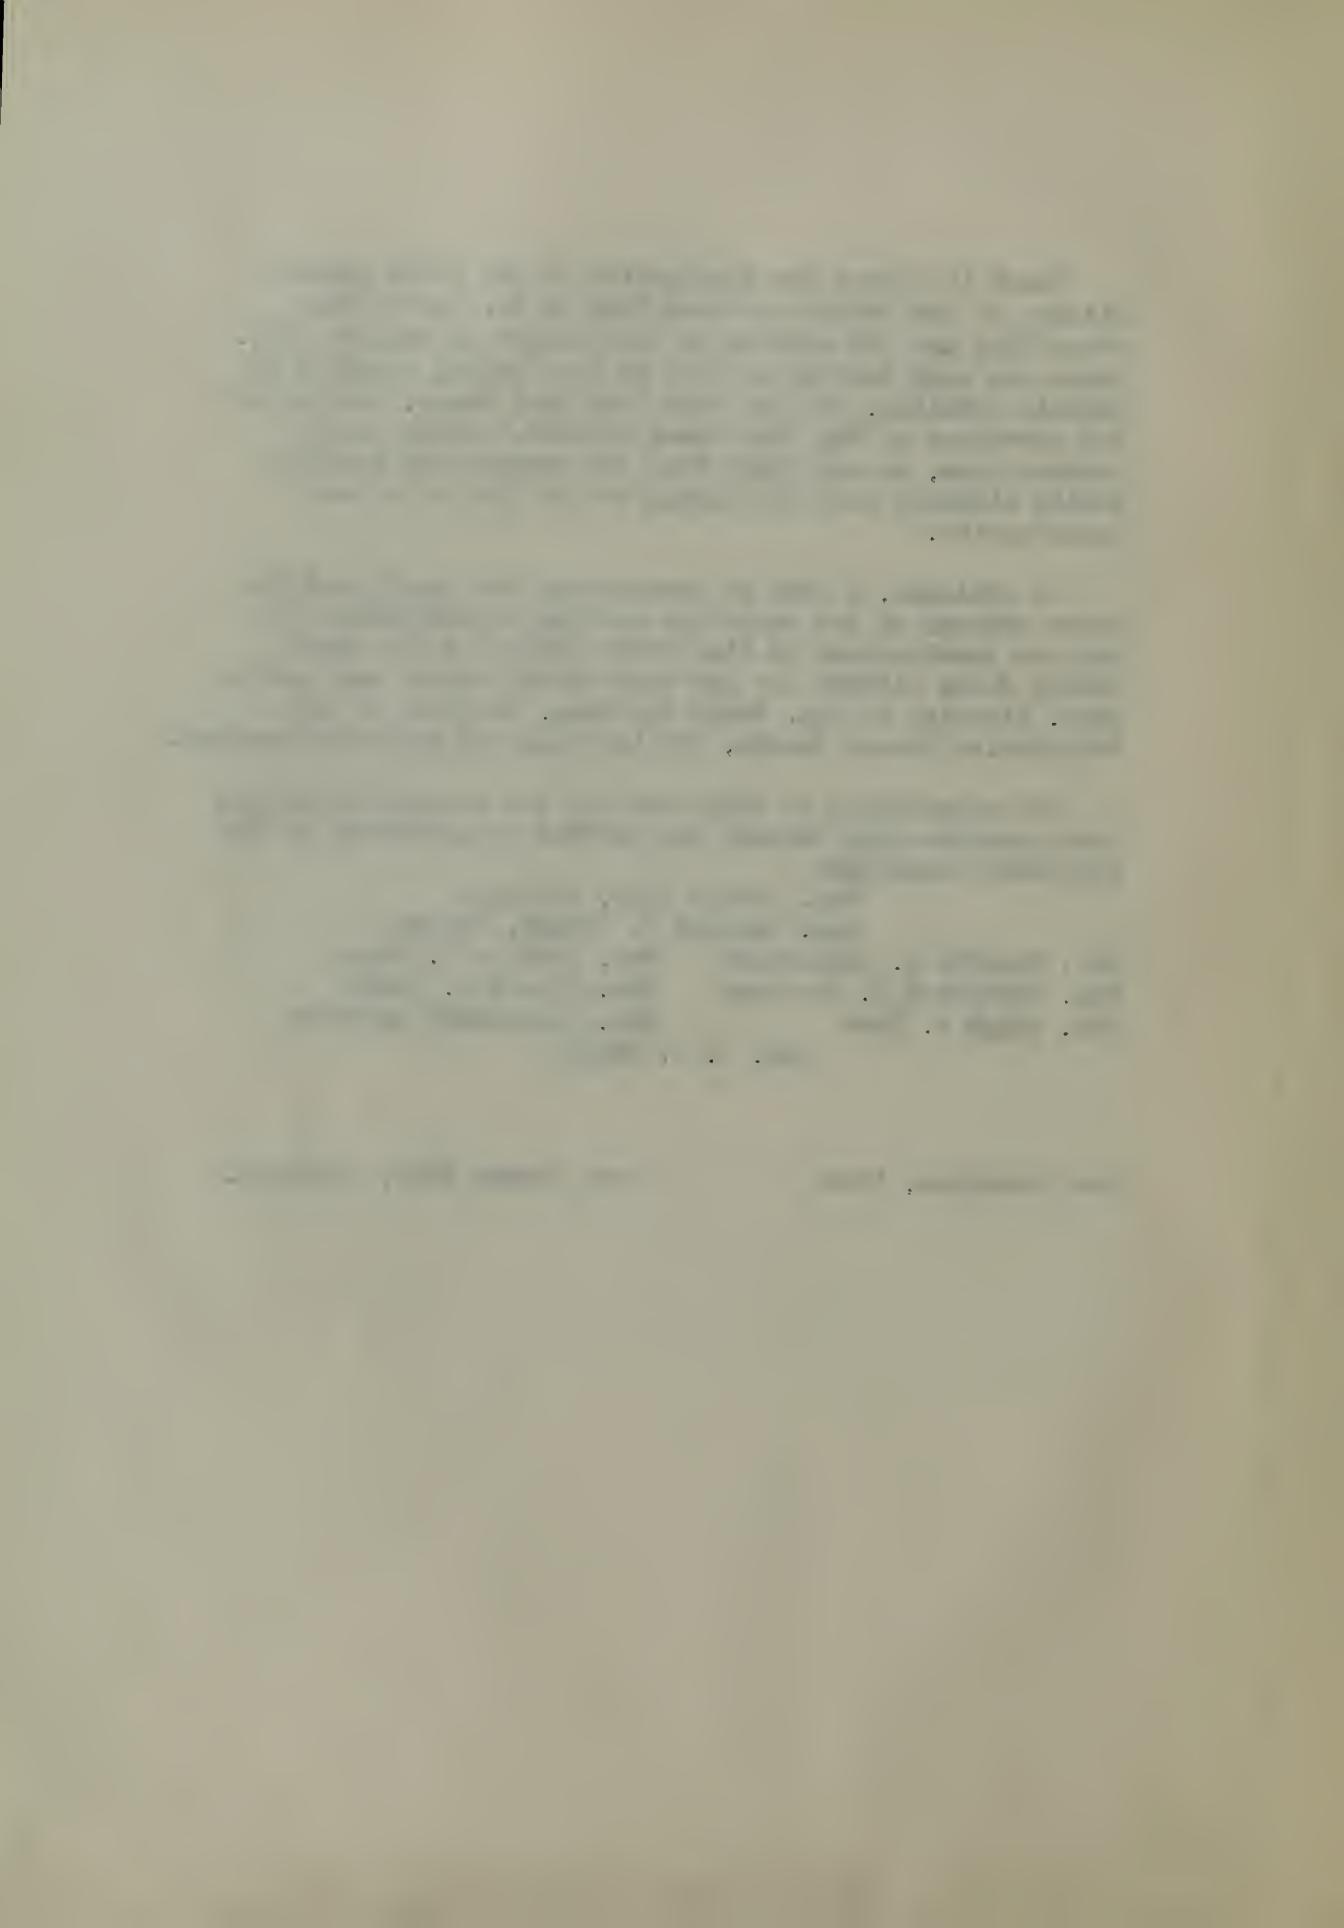

As Chairman, I wish to acknowledge for myself and the other members of the committee our deep appreciation of, and our indebtedness to Miss Helen Bruner of the Sutro Branch State Library for her most valued advice and assistance. Likewise to Mrs. Scott Rountree, Chairman of the California Pioneer Charts, for her wise and inspiring counsel.

The undertaking of this work and its accomplishment has been possible only through the devoted co-operation of the following committee:

Mrs. Joseph Fife, Chairman
Mrs. Everett T. Grimes, Regent
Mrs. Rudolph H. Fenkhausen	Mrs. Charles E. Mowry
Mrs. Frederick O. Haefener	Mrs. Claude A. Shull
Mrs. Ralph N. Kent	Mrs. Marguerite Reynolds
Mrs. W. W. Wymore

San Francisco, 1942

Mrs. Joseph Fife, Chairman.

In the Vital Records for 1856, where a record is not found under the date of the record, or in that month, the investigator will find it only by search of the records of the year, month by month.

In the Records for 1857, this difficulty has been met by adding the date of the issue of the paper when the event, recorded in the record took place, as, see Paper of

Funeral Notice of James King of William from
The Daily Evening Bulletin, May 20 (i.e., May 21), 1856

Mr. King's funeral will take place tomorrow,
(May 22, 1856), Thursday, at 12 o'clock, from the Unitarian Church, on Stockton St. bet. Clay and Sacramento Sts.

The service will be conducted by the Rev. Mr.
Cutler, pastor of the Church, assisted by Messrs.

No paper will be issued from this office tomorrow.

While there were columns of editorials in all of the journals of San Francisco and elsewhere on the assassination of James King of William, apparently the above funeral notice of The Daily Evening Bulletin served as the sole official announcement of his death and the funeral arrangements.
No notices in the regular death columns appear.

The announcement stands at the head of the column immediately below the names of the Editorial Staff.
