METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

Location, southwest corner of Washington and Ninth streets. Rev. C. V. Anthony, Pastor; residence, 917 Alice Street.

This church was organized in 1862, through the exertions of Rev. C. E. Rich, who entered upon his duties as Pastor in September of the same year, and continued in charge until September, 1864, when he was succeeded by the Rev. C. Miller, who officiated one year. The Rev. H. H. Hartwell next took charge, until September, 1866, when he was succeeded by the Rev. L. Walker, who officiated until September, 1869, when he was succeeded by the Rev. T. S. Dunn, who officiated until September, 1872, when the Rev. W. J. McClay served for one year, and was followed by the present Pastor. In December, 1862, a small building was erected on the corner of Sixth and Washington streets, and used as a chapel until 1864, when the society purchased a lot for the sum of $1,000, and erected the edifice now occupied by them at a cost of about $4,500. The society has recently purchased land on the southwest corner of Fourteenth and Clay streets for $10,000, on which they are erecting a fine substantial church to cost about $35,000. Number of communicants, June, 1875, three hundred and thirty-two.

The Sunday school connected with the church was organized December, 1862. It has an average attendance of two hundred teachers and scholars, and a library of eight hundred and ninety-three volumes. AFRICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

Location, southeast corner of Market and Seventh streets. (Vacant), Pastor.

This church had its origin in 1862, when a small congregation was brought together through the exertions of Mr. Abram Gross, who preached to them for a time in a school house near the corner of Clay and Fifth streets. They afterwards worshiped for a few months at the residence of a member of the congregation, and then in the public school house at Brooklyn.

In 1863 they organized and purchased a lot and the small wooden
