

JANITORS.

John Scannell and Cornelius Quick, North Hall.
John Hart and Peter McEvoy, South Hall.

Golden Gate Academy.

J. N. Harkins and A. E. Kellogg, Principals. Located on Academy Hill, near Telegraph avenue. Students of both sexes received, either as boarders or day scholars.

ACADEMY DEPARTMENT.

In the management of this department three objects are made prominent. First, to provide for the young men and women of this Coast sure advantages for obtaining such fitness for college and university as to prepare them to realize the highest results from their after study. In the academic, classical and English courses, the student will find such studies as are necessary to a thorough preparation for university courses. Any who have a partial preparation, whose studies have been interrupted, will usually find here classes which they can enter without loss of time. By far the larger class of students do not expect to pursue a collegiate course, yet desire an English education more or less complete. These will find in the English course a complete curriculum of English study, special attention being paid to English composition, grammar, language-lessons, and other studies bearing upon our much neglected mother tongue.

A system of daily marking is observed in all departments of the school, and a weekly report of the scholarship and deportment of each pupil is made out and read before the assembled school every Tuesday morning. Each separate report is transferred to postal card and sent to the parent or guardian interested, so that week by week he is kept informed of the progress of those whom he has in the school.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

This department has two divisions—a grammar room and a primary. The grades correspond very nearly to those in the public schools; however, examinations for promotion are held quarterly, so that those capable of rapid advancement are not necessarily detained a whole year in one grade.

The building occupied by this department was built with special reference to its accommodation, and is a model of convenience in every respect. There are some thirty rooms, large and well ventilated, furnished with single beds, and as