Munchville, Colusa Co, P O address, Sulphur Creek, 35 miles west-south-west of Colusa, is the center of the quicksilver region of Colusa county, recently developed. Among the principal mines are the Abbott, Buckeye, Elgin, Manzanita, Turner, Yellow Jacket, Empire, Last Chance, Washington, and others, which are already producing considerable quicksilver for the market. The Elgin produces from three to five thousand dollars worth of quicksilver monthly, and the Abbott about twice that amount. These mines are all in the vicinity of Munchville and Wilbur Springs, near the border of Lake county. This newly created village is connected with the world by the wires of the Colusa, Mendocino and Lake Telegraph Company, and has an express office, several stores, saloons, hotels, etc., appertaining to a busy mining town. A line of stages run daily to Colusa, also two lines of fast freight teams, all well patronized, showing the increasing importance of the place.

Murphys, Calaveras Co, P O 18 miles s e of San Andreas, on the stage road from Stockton to the Big Trees, is a small mining town on the headwaters of the Calaveras River, and was formerly distinguished for the productiveness of its placers. Gold was discovered in the vicinity early in 1849, and large fortunes were made in the first year by Murphy, Veber and Isbell, who were early pioneers, and explored this region of country soon after the discovery of gold. This is about twelve miles southwest of the Big Tree Grove, and its hotels and stables afford accommodation to the tourists visiting that noted locality. Near Murphys are extensive deposits of rich hematite iron ore, and a broad belt of limestone, in which is found vest of gold-bearing quartz. Gold, copper, iron and quicksilver are found in close association. The altitude is about 2,500 feet above the sea, and is in the region of snows in winter but without severe cold, and blest with the delightful mountain climate of summer.

Napa City, Napa Co, P O, County seat and incorporated town is at the head of tide water on Napa river, which to this point is navigable for vessels and steamers of light draught, and a line of boats run semi-weekly to San Francisco. The Napa Valley branch of the California Pacific Railroad, from Vallejo to Calistoga, runs through the town, it being fifteen miles from the former, and twenty-seven from the latter place. By this means communication is maintained through the valley, and with the metropolis, twice daily. The town is in the center of the beautiful and fertile Napa Valley, with pleasant surroundings of hills and plains, of oak-covered knolls and cultivated fields, of handsome cottage homes and fruit-laden orchards, swept by a gentle summer breeze from the bay and the ocean, giving health and purity to the atmosphere; it knows no winter, but claims perpetual loveliness. These sanative and pleasant conditions caused its selection as the site of the Branch Insane Asylum, the building for which is in course of construction, to cost about one million dollars. This is located about two miles from the town, on a slight elevation, and will be a conspicuous and interesting object to the travelers of the valley. The schools of Napa claim high rank, and are worthy the present site and romantic surroundings. Besides the public schools there are four first-class seminaries and colleges for the education of the youth of both sexes. The churches and public buildings are worthy ornaments of a thriving town. The present population numbers about 5,000, and is steadily increasing. Here the business of the county centers, and as its resources of agriculture, mines and commerce develop will it increase. Two newspapers are published, the Reporter, a wide-spread weekly, and the Register, both daily and weekly.
