Davis County. Organized in 1849. Bounded north by Weber, east by Morgan, south by Salt Lake County, and west by the Great Salt Lake.

Area, 320 square miles. Assessed valuation of property for 1870, $464,870. County seat, Farmington.

Principal towns, Bountiful, Centerville and Kaysville. This was one of the counties organized by the independently established State of Deseret. It is on the eastern shore of the Great Salt Lake, extending eastward over the Wasatch Mountains, and includes in its western portion some of the best agricultural land of the Territory. The numerous small streams flowing from the mountains afford means for irrigation, and the beautiful and prosperous villages that have grown upon the otherwise arid waste are the result of a well-directed industry.

The Utah Central Railroad, from Salt Lake City to the Pacific Railroad at Ogden, crosses the county, giving its settled portion convenient access to the markets of the world.

Officers: William R. Smith, Probate Judge; Joseph

Barton, Clerk and Surveyor; Robert W. Burton,

Sheriff; Arthur Stayner, Recorder; Ezra T. Clark,

Treasurer; William Reeves, Tax Collector and Assessor; Jesse W. Smith, Coroner; Jacob Miller, Superintendent Public Schools.
