Iron County. Organized in 1849. Bounded north by Beaver and Piute, east by Colorado Territory, south by Kane and Washington, and west by the State of Nevada. Area, 9,230 square miles. Assessed valuation of property for 1874, $453,366. County seat, Parowan. Principal towns: Cedar City, Hamilton, Iron City, and Paragonah. The county comprises a broad extent of territory, but little of which possesses available resources. Iron ore is found in abundance in the Iron Range of mountains, in the western part of the county, which is successfully mined and smelted by the Great Western Iron Co., which has expended half a million dollars in the erection of furnaces and developing its property. This company's property does not appear on the assessor's roll, as it is encouraged by exemption from taxation for ten years from the date of its incorporation. The product is large, of an excellent quality of soft iron, and its prospects are bright. At the base of the same range are found the best agricultural lands, and some 5,000 acres are cultivated, about two-thirds of which are in wheat. Three flouring and three saw mills are established, supplying the inhabitants with flour and lumber, and some for exportation to the neighboring mining camps of Nevada. The resources of the county are but in part developed, and await the coming of a more numerous and enterprising population.

Juab County. Organized in 1852. Bounded north by Utah and Tooele, east by San Pete, south by Millard, and west by the State of Nevada. Area, 1,100 square miles. Assessed valuation of property in 1874, $500,000. County seat, Nephi. Principal towns, Diamond, Eureka, Sevan, Mona, Nebo, Silver City, and Tintic. These are mostly mining towns, or districts, and are in a promising state of development. The mountains appear to be full of minerals, silver, copper, lead, and iron predominating. At Tintic are four quartz mills, and three smelting furnaces. Mt. Nebo contains immense deposits of galena, supposed to be rich in silver, but the wealth is only slightly developed. Salt is mined and manufactured in large quantities, both from deposits as rock salt, and from springs. Near Tintic are large deposits of gypsum. These valuable resources of wealth invite capital and labor, but await the construction of the Utah Southern, or other railroad, through the county. The county is centrally located, and in a high and mountainous region, having within it the sources of streams running north to Utah Lake, and southwest to Sevier River and lake. The highest land is Mount Nebo, in the northern part, 12,000 feet above the sea, and along the eastern border is the most elevated portion of the Wasatch Range. The agricultural area is quite limited, about 6,000 acres being under cultivation. The principal road of Utah passes through the county, through the long line of settlements extending from the northern to the southern extremity of the Territory.

Sperry, Sheriff; John Tyker, Recorder; Edwin Blakey, Treasurer; Charles Price, Surveyor; Charles Sperry, Coroner; T. B. Lewis, Superintendent Public Schools.

Kane County. Organized in 1864.

Bounded north by Iron; east by Colorado Territory; south by Arizona Territory; and west by Washington. Area, 7,500 square miles. Assessed valuation of property for 1874, $291,702. County seat, Toquerville. Principal towns: Glendale, Kanab, Kanarrab, Mount Carmel, Rockville, and Virgin City. This large county has until recently been but little known, but the explorations made by Lieutenant Wheeler and Major Powell, the first through the country generally and the latter along the Colorado River, our knowledge of the region has been increased and much valuable land has
