

been developed. The county has received large accessions to its population, and is rapidly settling up. The Colorado crosses the county, chiefly hidden in an almost inaccessible cañon, which in some places is from two to three thousand feet in depth. The San Juan River, having its source in New Mexico, runs for more than one hundred and twenty-five miles in this county, and joins the Colorado. The Rio Virgen, with much fertile land, is in the southwest. The Wasatch range of mountains divides the Great Basin from the waters of the Colorado, and west of this range are the principal settlements. Fruits of every variety, cotton, grain, sheep and cattle, are raised successfully, and considerable wine and brandy are made. Near Kanab, in the Wasatch mountains, are valuable coal mines, which are quite extensively worked, the coal making excellent coke, that is in demand at the smelting furnaces of Iron and Beaver Counties and at Pioche.

Officers: William A. Bringham, Probate Judge; M. Slack, Clerk, Recorder, Auditor, and Superintendent Public Schools; John Steele, Prosecuting Attorney, Tax Collector, Assessor, and Surveyor; Isaac Duffin, Treasurer; James Jepson, Coroner.

Logan, Cache Co, P O and County seat, 90 miles north of Salt Lake City, is near the northern limit of the Territory, in the beautiful Cache Valley, and is a very prosperous town of about 2,500 inhabitants. The Utah Northern Railroad, leading from Ogden to Franklin in Idaho, and which it is proposed to extend to Soda Springs, has a depot at Logan. The great route of travel and transportation from the Pacific Railroad to Montana passes through the town, giving it a large business. The valley in which it is situated is about 40 miles in length by ten in breadth, and is one of the most fertile of Utah. Logan River, rising near Bear Lake, waters the valley, and is noted for its romantic beauty and the abundance of its fish.
