

The illustrations and the examples given in the book are used merely to assist in this first explanation, or by the pupil, for practice, in studying the lesson, and are as often "worked" by the teacher as the student. At recitation, new examples, which the student has never before seen, are presented to him to test his knowledge of the principles of which he is required first to state, either in his own language or in that of the book, but clearly and correctly.

By this system of teaching, as distinguished from mere hearing of lessons, the pupil is lead to think for himself while gathering knowledge from others, and is thus truly educated.

The School is steadily growing in public favor.

MacRae, Dean.

The Morgan Conservatory of Music.

Location, 528 Eighteenth street.

This institution was established about three years since, under the direction of the late Mr. John P. Morgan, and its success, so far, has demonstrated the great necessity for such a school upon this coast. Its object is to afford students an opportunity of obtaining a complete and thorough course of instruction, both in the theory and practice of music.

To attain this end the best talent in the State is employed, and the number of teachers will be increased as necessity demands. It is now under the direction of Mr. Stephen W. Leach.

California Military Academy.

Rev. David McClure, Principal.

Located on east side of Telegraph avenue, near Prospect avenue. The military system of drilling and discipline has been adopted to secure physical culture, promptness, presence of mind and its attendant results.
