

OAKLAND Seminary was organized by the present Principal, Mrs. M. K. Blake, November, 1858, and was re-opened January 6, 1890.

Its departments are Kindergarten, Primary, Intermediate, College Preparatory and Graduate.

Ancient and Modern Languages, Drawing and Painting, Vocal and Instrumental Music are taught by experienced and thorough teachers of the first order.

Special course of study can be pursued. Individual attention will be given to pupils when necessary for their advancement.

This institution prepares scholars for the University and Eastern Colleges.

Particular attention is devoted to manners and to the formation of correct habits of thought and action.

Wednesday is the Reception Day, but visitors will be received in the school on any school day and at any hour for the purpose of inspecting the school.

Superior advantages in Vocal and Instrumental Music and in Drawing and Painting.

Musical and literary entertainments, for which a grand piano is provided, will be frequently given to afford opportunity to judge of progress in study and allow students the advantage of social intercourse in cultivated society.

The location is central, near churches and the principal assembly and lecture rooms of the city.

The schoolrooms are sunny and delightful, and the grounds have large inclosure for out-of-door recreation, containing croquet grounds and tennis court.

To each boarding pupil a home is promised with special care of health and happiness.

Students have their own pleasant parlor and can choose single or double sleeping rooms.

After one hour study each evening the time is passed in reading aloud and sewing or embroidery, except Friday evening which is set apart for entertainment and amusement.

Pupils are required to repair their clothes each week, under the supervision of a competent person appointed for the purpose.

A class in plain sewing or embroidery will be formed for those who desire it.

No pupil will be retained who is found to have a bad influence in the school.
