

SOCIETY LIFE

It is an invariable rule with "Society that knows" when entertaining their friends to use the best of everything that can be procured. When you depart from that time-honored custom, you lay yourself open to very unpleasant criticism, and often from sources you would and should least expect. To command success, every detail must be looked into, the sending of invitations, the decorating of the rooms, the programme of entertainment, which must be varied and not too long, and last and not the least, the supper and refreshments, and when you reach that point procure the finest brands of Champagnes, Clarets and Sauternes, and you could not do better in that case than to make your selections at Em. Meyer & Co's, at Nos. 413 and 415 Pine street, where the best of everything in that particular line can be had—a fact well known to our Connoisseurs and Society leaders.
