

Rugby Military Academy

Berkeley, California.

The Rugby Military Academy, situated at Ward, Ellsworth, Fulton and Derby Streets, Berkeley, California, opened its doors on the fifteenth day of August, nineteen hundred and seven. It offered, what its founders thought and have since proven, a broad and liberal training for the discriminating youth of to-day. It offered two complete departments, the Scholastic and the Military, both as fully developed as was possible at the time of starting. The Scholastic Department took for its model the best accredited preparatory schools in the state, aiming all the time at fulfilling the requirements set by the University of California and Stanford. Masters were secured from the better universities to direct the young ideas, and courses of study mapped out that would best fit the average youth of to-day. Individual work has been aimed at in all cases and has been accomplished. The cadets have had the advantage of the best training in all lines of studies, as they have had individual teaching.

The Military Department in the academy has proven one of the most successful features. It is a wonderful training for the average boy and not alone fits the body but sharpens the mind. Military order is everywhere prevalent, no part of the school being free from that discipline. The practical course of instruction in this department consists of cavalry drill (mounted and dismounted), guard duty, inspection, rifle practice, setting up exercises, practice marches, sham battles, etc., etc.

To obtain the best results the number of students is limited, and only boys of correct morals, who will cheerfully obey the rules of the school, need apply for admission. Furthermore, each applicant must present a certificate of good character from his former teacher, and at least two other references of satisfactory nature.
