

COULTER G. M. postmaster Douglass J. F. farmer and vine-yardist
Duke J. G. farmer and vine-yardist
Engle H. W. farmer
Eno A. farmer
Fox P. farmer
Fraser D. A. blacksmith Gallagher F. farmer and vine-
 yardist
Godfrey W. S. farmer and poultryman Greattor W. B. foreman Jersey farm Hanratta J. farmer and poultry-man Jenkins W. W. farmer and vineyardist
Lardner Frank B. operator
Mack A. H. farmer
Mack J. Sr. laborer
Mack R. laborer
Maloney M. laborer
Mount M. saloon
POSTMASTER. G. M. Coulter Sheppa P. farmer and fruit grower
Smith D. laborer
Smith M. laborer
Sweeny J. farmer
Taylor L. C. proprietor Jersey
 Farm and vineyardist Tuck Jeremiah farmer
Wehneman H. farmer

Benicia.

THIS town, the second in size in the county, has historic as well as commercial prominence in the State. Laid out in 1847, receiving its name from the wife of the old pioneer, General Vallejo, it for a long time was in the lists as a candidate for the State capitol, and for one session, that of 1853, enjoyed that transitory honor. For eight years it was the county seat, the removal to Fairfield being determined upon for the purpose only of securing a more central location. The town is well built and in its business interests received a considerable stimulus in the opening of the new branch of the California Pacific Railroad from Suisun the entire through traffic of the line being now sent via Benicia. The transfer service over Carquinez Straits being effected on the largest railroad ferry boat in the world. The city has five private educational institutions besides a well organized system of public schools. Its hotel accommodations are equal to the average, although the Palace Hotel on First Street conducted by Mr. Fred Hund deserves to be classed above the average. Here are located also capacious military barracks and the United States Arsenal, the only one on the Pacific Coast. The town has complete railroad, postal, express, and telegraphic connections and a population of about 1800.

Aitchison Robert, barber, First Allison O. B., bookkeeper with Morey & Farnsworth, Palace Hotel
Anderson N. M., Benicia Packing Co.
Anderson P., fisherman, cor First and A Armstrong Richard, clerk with W. H. Foreman, res First Axelrod S., general merchandise, cor First and I Bank of Benicia, W. F. Goad, president, J. E. Crooks, cashier, First Barry James, general merchandise and Justice of the Peace, First Barry James M., salesman with James Barry, res First