

MENDOCINO COUNTY.

THIS county, lying along the northern coast, is bounded on the north by Humboldt and Trinity Counties, on the east by Colusa and Lake, on the south by Sonoma, and on the west by the Pacific Ocean; and contains an area of 3816 square miles.

The nature of the country is extremely mountainous, the Coast Range occupying its entire length and rising in its boundaries into some of its highest summits. Many streams rising in the heights flow into the ocean furnishing some tolerable harbors; although none are sufficiently land-locked as to be classed as safe in rough weather.

The resources of the county are varied, although up to the present time no great amount of development has been made except in the lumbering and grazing interests. Great forests of redwood and fir are found along the entire coast and covering almost the entire area of the county. The annual lumber production at present exceeds 50,000,000 feet and 15,000,000 shingles. While the grazing interest is indicated in the statement that there are over 300,000 sheep held in the county.

The county, however, only waits the extension to her limits of the railroad system which has done so much for other portions of the State, to join with and keep pace in the march of development. The present population is about 13,000.
