

support of the indigent sick and insane sustained by the State. The State Marine Hospital is pleasantly located on Stockton street, between Broadway and Vallejo, streets commanding a partial view of the Bay of San Francisco from North Beach. The present Buildings are much better adapted for such an Institution than the ones first selected.

THE YERBA BUENA CEMETERY.

Located at the Junction of Market and McAllister streets, AND CONTAINING AN AREA OF TEN ACRES.

The first burial in this Cemetery was in the early part of the year 1850. Since that period, it has been the principal place of interments; and at the present time numbers near 4,000 graves. Since the establishment of this Cemetery, about 350 interments have been made at the Mission Dolores; making a total of 4,350, for a term of three years and ten months.

In connection with the above, one important fact must be remembered, and that is, that during the years 1850 and 1851, the greater portion of the deaths that occurred in this city were of those who arrived here sick in vessels from sea, or from different parts of the State, a large proportion of whom were so reduced on their arrival as to be beyond the aid of medical skill.

With these facts before us, recollecting too the difficulty, nay, almost impossibility that then existed in procuring nurses, or suitable quarters for the sick, we think that, in point of health, the city of San Francisco will favorably compare with any city of the Union.

 For the above information we are indebted to NATHANIEL GRAY, Esq., undertaker, 192 Sacramento street.
