Dedicated December 25, 1854. The Church is seventy-five feet wide, fronting on California Street, by 131 feet on Dupont Street, being the largest church in the State. A portion of the basement is now used for a school and a library, the rest being reserved for a small chapel. Service was begun at midnight on December 24, 1854. The basement portion, which is 19 feet high, is lighted from both sides and well ventilated. The present expenditure on the building is $140,000, and will require $15,000 more to complete it. The Church portion is 45 feet high in the clear and contains spacious galleries and an organ loft. The ceilings are vaulted with a series of groined arches which are decorated, and every means has been resorted to for accommodation, light and ventilation. The Church can seat twelve hundred persons. The tower is at present 135 feet high, and when completed, with the spire, will be 200 feet high. The edifice is of Gothic architecture, which has been carried out in every detail through the building. In all the arrangements for the erection of the Church, the greatest attention has been paid to the selection of the best materials, and to the combination of strength and durability, which are admirably effected in its construction. This Church was organized by Very Rev. Anthony Langlois in the spring of 1849, through whose efforts a commodious frame building was erected in the month of December, 1849, and was the first Roman Catholic Church organized in San Francisco. Its ground base was 40 by 100 feet, one story in height. During the past year a large and commodious Church has been erected, which was dedicated on the 17th March last. Its design is of the Gothic order, prevalent in the fourteenth century, presenting an illustration of the Christian Architecture of that period. The principal features of this imposing structure are the towers, which project beyond the body of the Church, and present in their elevation four divisions, rising to a height of 90 feet from the ground. The entrance porch, or vestibule, has two side aisles, a semi-octagonal sanctuary, and two sacristies, and is approached by a flight of ten steps, ascending to the vestibule, from which, at each side, are entrances to the galleries and baptistry, and in front are the pointed arch doorways which lead to the nave and aisles. In the central space, between the towers, are the three doorways communicating with the vestibule, and thence with the interior. Over the central door there is a large and elegant three-compartment window, and in the gable, a highly decorated rose window. Over each side door, there is a lofty and spacious niche, which rises from richly moulded brick corbels; there are, also, three marble panels, with appropriate inscriptions, recessed in the brickwork immediately over each doorway and the gable; the work is finished with a massive and richly decorated cross.

The east and west sides of the structure are divided by buttresses into eight spaces, in each instance; seven of which contain the large pointed arch windows which light the Church. Beneath the floor of the Church, there is a large and well-lighted basement, which is to be used as a school-room, and also as a place of meeting for the parishioners. The extreme length of the building is 66 by 137½ feet; from the floor to the foot of the rafters, is 35 feet. The cost to complete, will be nearly $100,000.
