

The advertisement of Mr. J. T. BOWERS, presents unusual inducements to those in want of any kind or description of Musical Instruments, especially his Pianos of Hallet, Davis & Co's manufacture. These instruments are all made in a superior manner, with strong cases, of good action and durable workmanship. They have all the modern improvements and keep in tune in any climate or weather. They claim superiority to all other pianos, as they possess improvements which no other manufacturers apply to their pianos, of which we would notice, the Suspension Bridge, which produces a pure and sweet tone in the high octaves. Also, the Steel Bar, the object of which is to prevent the extreme heat or cold from affecting the piano. And further, we would add, that these pianos are all furnished with iron frames, overstrung action, and all other modern appliances.

As evidence of their superiority, we have only to state that Messrs. Hallet, Davis & Co., have received during the past twenty years, in various fairs and prize exhibitions throughout the States, premiums over other competitors ; besides, the pianos have been endorsed by Messrs. Strakosch, Mason, Satter, Gottschalk and others too numerous to mention. They are furnished in any style and size and varying in price from $275 to $1,000.

Next in order, we would call attention to his celebrated Harmoniums of S. D. & H. W. Smiths' manufacture ; which, for their beauty and purity of tone, together with their adaptability, alike for churches and private families, stand unequaled. They vary in size, the smallest being a four and a half octave instrument in portable case, with patent forte-stop, and worth $70. The largest size is a handsome instrument of five octaves, rosewood case, two banks of keys, four stops, one and a half octaves of foot pedals and separate bellows with its own handle, and worth $400. Between these extremes, are fifteen different additional sizes, all varying in styles, quality and price, from which any purchaser cannot fail to make a satisfactory selection.

Mr. Bowers publishes new music ; also, attends to having music bound in the best style. In his list of music and musical books of those not mentioned, may be found Instruction books in endless variety. Also, a large assortment of church music, complete operas and oratorios, bound music, etc., etc.
