

one above the other. These are for the presiding authorities. Behind these are seats for a choir of forty voices; still further behind and a little higher is the grand organ, the third largest in America, and the largest ever built in the United States. All the public buildings are worthy of note. The Theatre is large and built of stone, on a scale corresponding with the buildings spoken of, and has sitting room for 1,700 persons. The Council House, Court House and City Hall, are all worthy of a visit. Besides the handsome little Protestant Episcopal church, erected some time ago, and the Liberal Institute, built by the Godbeites and now used as a sort of general lecture room, the Catholics and Episcopal Methodists are building handsome churches. The Catholic church was recently dedicated by Archbishop Alemany, though not yet entirely completed. The Methodist Episcopal church is having a fine building erected on Third South street near Main, which will have a seating capacity of about a thousand, with a basement for scholastic purposes and rooms for the principal of the Methodist Seminary and the Pastor. The Salt Lake Seminary, under the auspices of the M. E. church, is for the present held in the rooms formerly occupied by the St. Mark's school, two blocks south of P. O. in Main street. Some of the private residences, particularly those of Brigham Young, are very fine. The Hotels are good. The principal ones are the Salt Lake, Townsend, Revere and White House. There are four newspapers published here: the Review, published by Kenyon and Fenton, is a first class daily; the Salt Lake Herald, the Mormon Tribune, and the Deseret News, are all live papers for a live people.

The Model Lodging House of the Pacific Coast.