

S

Sachs Bros., gen'l mdse, Jacksonville.

Saffarrans Henry, druggist, Oregon City.

SALEM.—On the east bank of the Willamette river, at a point navigable for steamers during most of the year, is situated most advantageously and beautifully the city of Salem, county seat of Marion county and Capital of Oregon. Besides its commercial interests, the other advantages will be greatly enhanced by the route of the California and Oregon Railroad passing through here. This place has the honor of having erected the first woolen mill on this coast, it having been built in 1857 by the Willamette Woolen Manufacturing Company. Salem is noted for its educational and ecclesiastical institutions, and has received the sobriquet of "The City of Churches," it having more church buildings than any other city or town of its size on the coast. There are five public schools, and several private schools of a high order. The Willamette University, located at this place, is an elegant brick structure, is one of the best of schools, and has a medical department attached. Salem has a population of about five thousand; is one of the most elegantly laid out, best regulated and promising cities of its size on the Pacific slope, and is every way worthy of being the Capital of so fair and flourishing a State. Four newspapers are here published: the Oregon Statesman, daily and weekly; Willamette Farmer, weekly; Willamette Valley Mercury, weekly; and the Medical and Surgical Reporter, monthly.

SAVAGE C. W., saloon, Jacksonville. (See adv. p.671.)