

this gain over three per cent are males under twenty-one and females under eighteen. These figures present a favorable exhibit of the prosperous growth of the city during the past twelve months; and when considered in connection with the data published elsewhere in this volume, they may be regarded as the most gratifying evidences of the future importance of the Metropolis of the Pacific Coast.

For the purpose of reference, we republish from the SAN FRANCISCO DIRECTORY for 1871 the figures of the Census of the City and County of San Francisco, as compiled in this city; also the official table of the Census Bureau at Washington. The totals of the latter differ materially from those contained in the former; for instance, the aggregate population is given at 149,473; the colored population at 1,341, and the Chinese, 12,018.

"The male population of this city, according to these figures, it will be observed, is 75,824; of this number 23,722 are under fifteen years of age. No separate figures are presented of the adult portion or the number between fifteen and twenty-one, and in order to arrive at an approximation of these elements, about thirty-five per cent of the number under fifteen, the ratio according to the census returns of 1860, of Massachusetts, Ohio and Oregon, should be added thereto, and the aggregate made thereby, taken from the entire census of males, will produce the following result: Under fifteen, 23,722, add thirty-five per cent, 8,302, for those between fifteen and twenty-one; total under twenty-one, 32,024, which deducted from 75,824 will leave as the adult population, according to the Federal Census of 1870, 43,800."
