MARINERS' CHURCH, THE, of San Francisco. Was organized by its present Pastor, Rev. J. Rowell, in 1853. It finds its field for usefulness among the seamen and strangers on our water front. It has a good and commodious house of worship on the northeast corner of Sacramento and Drumm streets, erected in 1866. Here religious meetings are held every day in the week, temperance meetings twice in each month, correspondence maintained with seamen in all parts of the world, a free reading room maintained (the first free reading room in the city), with books and papers in various languages, and writing materials, all free, social entertainments given twice a week, and large quantities of good reading matter supplied to out-bound ships. All vessels in port, and sailors' boarding-houses, are often visited, and all possible effort is made to save seamen from perils and vices, and make them good citizens and Christian men. The church is undenominational, self-governed, and is aided in its work by Christian and philanthropic people of every name.

REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS. Meets in Harmony Hall, Red Men's Building, 320 Post street. Services every Sabbath at 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening, and a literary meeting under Zion's Religio Society on Friday evening. Their minister the past year is Rev. C. A. Parkin, who is also the Presiding Elder of the Northern California District Conference. The church has always clung to the doctrine of one wife for one man. The chief feature of their church is an acceptance of the New Testament form of church organization, as outlined in Ephesians, 4th chap., and an aspiration after the spiritual gifts named in 1 Cor., 12th chap., which they claim God in mercy bestows upon them when He will, not when they will.
