Office and factory, 730 Second Street, near Townsend.

The Western Expanded Metal & Fireproofing Co. came out of the calamity with their factory and shop intact and are now engaged in doing considerable repair and construction work, being probably the first ones to get actually at work on the Kohl Building, corner of California and Montgomery Streets, which building was originally fire-proofed by this Company, and came out of the fire in better condition than any other building in the fire limits.

The Company's factory is now running, usual time, and are filling large orders for Expanded Metal, and are prepared to furnish Expanded Metal of all gauges and sizes, as well as the famous Corrugated Steel Bars, for which they are the agents on the Pacific Coast, for fireproofing purposes, and have arranged with their Eastern Associates and Rolling Mills to take care of every order they may require in San Francisco, even to the extent of the entire rebuilding of this city.

The buildings fireproofed by this Company, like the Fairmont Hotel, the Kohl Building, the Monadnock, the Newman & Levison, California Wine Association Building, the J. A. Folger Warehouse, Ferry Building, United States Postoffice and Courthouse Building, 7th and Mission Streets, Young Building, corner Spear and Market Streets, and many others came out of the fire in splendid condition and show the value of their construction. As this is a Home Industry builders should calculate to patronize the same before sending their money abroad.
