

RUNNYMEDE

The Runnymede poultry colony is located just across the boundary line in San Mateo county. The colony is made up of small farms devoted to intensive agriculture and poultry. A large proportion of the population receives mail from the Palo Alto postoffice only by the rural free delivery. The houses are not numbered. In the accompanying list the name is given, the street upon which the home is located, then the rural free delivery box number, which will enable searchers to locate residences. In some instances Runnymede residents have boxes at the Palo Alto postoffices, the number being given in such cases. Delivery of mail through the Menlo Park postoffice has been discontinued.

Runnymede is not incorporated. Children attend the Ravenswood school, which in 1916 had not more than a dozen pupils. Now there is an attendance of 164. Trustees are L. H. Brown, clerk; Mrs. J. A. Cameron and E. R. Lam. The teachers are Mrs. A. Lee Hampton, principal; Misses Bernice Ewell, Aurelia Weston, Louise Clark and Ruth Harris.

Organizations

Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce—Roy R. Waterbury, president; J. A. Cameron, vice president; J. H. Stubbe, secretary and treasurer.

The Woman's Club of Runnymede is very active. It plans to erect a clubhouse soon. The officers are: President, Mrs. F. C. Nickerson; treasurer, Mrs. James Cairns; secretary, Mrs. J. A. Cameron.

A lodge of the Improved Order of Odd Fellows was organized during the past year with 26 members, officers as follows: Noble grand, A. A. Dollings; permanent secretary, Dr. E. R. Tait; elective secretary, H. C. Epperson; lecture master, C. E. Lammiman.

Gilbert Findley is superintendent of the non-sectarian Sunday school. He is also president of the Christian Endeavor Society, Miss Pauline Brooks being secretary. There is no church in Runnymede.

There are several social clubs and a thriving poultry association which looks after marketing colony products.
