GEORGE WASHINGTON HIGH SCHOOL
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

In Our Youth...

in these difficult times, we must go forth to prove to the people now at work in the world that we possess those essential qualities so necessary for success in that world.

Under our guidance, we sincerely hope that our country will be so directed that we may utilize to the full our self-earned education, acquired through the most modern teaching systems . . . We pledge ourselves that we shall genuinely strive for that which today we term AMBITION and shall tomorrow term ACHIEVEMENT.

But in this serious view of our future, we must not forget the lighter scenes of the present. Here within these pages we present a pictured story of our high school life, showing it in its entirety—its achievements and its activities. We are proud of our school and glad that the Christmas season gives us an opportunity to count our gifts without appearance of boasting.

May the lightheartedness of youth and the glory of our dreams continue throughout the lives of every one of us. May we always keep our pleasant memories of George Washington High School . . . And may we all have a very merry Christmas and a very happy New Year!

In this book we find that:

- I. People Make Washington
- II. Students Meet In Common Interests
- III. Sports Lead On To Victory

To You, Miss Kirwin...

Guardian of Graduates, our senior advisor, we dedicate this SURVEYOR, book of the seniors. May it convey to you some knowledge of our gratitude for your endless efforts to make our last year at George Washington and our Commencement a time we shall always remember; for your never-ending interest in all senior activities; for the role you play in keeping our school worthy of its honored name.

We Want to Say We're Pleased

HERE WE ARE . . . at the end of another term . . . and anxious to investigate the gifts under our Christmas tree. There are a lot of packages there . . . perhaps not presents in the true sense, since we've worked for them, but certainly things we want and things we're proud to have!

Here's an inter-room radio system unlike any other high school's in the city, enabling us to hear local or national programs—and here beside that is a short wave broadcasting station on which we may talk to distant voices. And here are national honor awards for our artists, and our journalists. And look—here are state awards for our R.O.T.C. and our musicians—and city awards for our traffic squads, our bankers, our cameramen. Who could want more than the "best" rating for our salesmen, our chessmen, our G.A.A., our debaters? No wonder we're proud and happy and maybe a little boastful. Anyway, we think, like Tiny Tim, that we all should have a very merry Christmas.

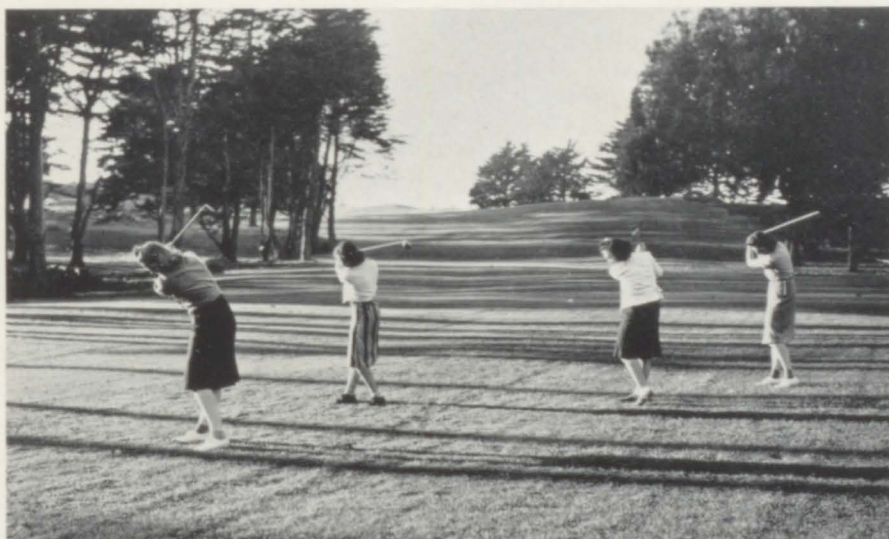

Indicative of the excellence of our R.O.T.C. is the band, winner of first place in the all-city contest last Spring. Among other awards won by the army boys are the Commandant's Cup in Fall, 1938; Most Efficient Battalion Commander in Spring, 1939; Honor School in Ninth Army Corps Area, Spring 1939.

We're the thriftiest school in San Francisco, leader among the high schools of the city since the first term of our existence. We own one trophy permanently, having achieved top rank four terms running, and have two legs on the next cup which we expect to own by the end of next term.

Outstanding artists—as witness the work in this and other Surveyors!—are among us. Grand Honor awards, honorable mentions, first prizes, shower upon our art department. The National Education Association has chosen Washington cartoons for national distribution for several years; a Washington girl designed a San Francisco booklet.

Among the things of which we're proudest are our views. Here is one of the finest, we think—a picture of some of our best girl golfers swinging in the sunlight at Lincoln Park, undisturbed by the shadows of the tall pines and the sea beyond.

It's Not Boasting...

The "strong arm of the law" is personified in this representative of the efficient traffic patrols of the school. Two squads—boys outside and girls inside—have maintained a no-accident record through Washington's three years of existence. Among their awards have been two firsts . . . for the best marching unit and for the most efficient patrols.

Pointing with the pride we also feel to another of our supreme views, Washington camera-men have climbed undaunted above the doorway of learning. Photographers here do much excellent work . . . remember the movie they took of all of us?...not confining their work to school subjects entirely. Last Spring they won first and second prizes in the beginners' division and placed second in the whole contest sponsored by the Federation of High School Camera Clubs.

They say the sign of a thinking man is his ability to play chess. If so, we have a number of thinkers among us, if the success of the Chess Club is any indication. One of the players pictured here holds second place for the number of games he has won in inter-school tournaments.

And maybe you think we're not proud of the genuine spirit of giving among our schoolfellows! Here is a table heaped high with canned goods contributed for Thanksgiving baskets for the less fortunate among us. Sharing these gifts was just part of the fun of Tin-Can and Town Meeting Day.

Melodies that charm decidedly come from the well-trained throats of the choral groups here. They thrill us all by occasional broadcasts and win excellent ratings and bronze medals from the California School Band, Orchestra, and Choral Association.

But We're Really Proud

When fun is combined with learning, then success is really achieved. And such surely is the case with our radio technicians who do all sorts of amazing things with the ether waves. We have a short-wave broadcasting and receiving set, through which we exchange programs with other schools; we have the only inter-classroom broadcasting system in San Francisco high schools; our radio stars have been on several national hookups.

Maybe we'd better not boast yet, but we hope you'll like this Surveyor, too. Anyway, we're pretty sure that everyone liked the four journals Washington has had so far. And we're proud of the fact that both books submitted to the National Scholastic Press Association for judging received First Class awards.

Among our hardest workers are those students who sacrificed noon hours and early morning snoozes to sell tickets and all the other things that must be sold around school. They are good, too, because they have sold more game tickets than have been sold in any other school in town. . . . Could our enthusiastic student personnel have anything to do with their success? . . . Anyway, we extend the official thanks of the student body to them for their voluntary service.

We have some debaters, too . . . who win first speaker-ships quite frequently . . . who also win their debates, incidentally . . . and bring academic glory to Washington. Long may they continue to expound so winningly upon the glories of democracy and the problems which only debaters know about!

People Make Washington

the splendid school that it is. In the pages that follow, who these people are, what they do, and how they do it is shown to you. Whole books could be written about the accomplishments of many of us. Each of us has contributed a share to make our stay here better. We have made friends which we shall always keep, formed associations from which we shall always benefit. Serving the same purpose that Santa Claus and his assistants do, Washingtonians work to make gifts for younger generations to enjoy.

PRESIDENT PAUL BELVEL CALLS EXECUTIVE COUNCIL TO ORDER

Principal's Message

Students of American History remember proudly and well the story of the "Message to Garcia" which turned out later to be a message to all Americans as well. The fortitude displayed by the messenger, his initiative, his persistence, his devotion to duty, his singleness of purpose and his final success inspire the rest of us Americans to realize what our country has meant to others and what it can mean to us.

Every George Washington graduate has a message to carry to the world he steps into, and this message is liable to draw its bearer into uncomfortable, even perilous ways. His message is no less than the American Way of Life, interpreted according to his own convictions and crystallized by his high school training. This is not always a message that the world expects, but we, who know our graduates, are convinced it is one the world should have. There is adventure today for our young people who carry the American Way of Life out into collision with world experience and world experiment. Graduates of George Washington High School, you have a message that everybody needs. Take it now. Take it far and carry it fearlessly.

ERNEST J. CUMMINGS

Principal of George Washington High School, Mr. Ernest J. Cummings has headed a faculty that has brought honor and respect wherever this school is known.

George Washington was an empty and cold building three and a half years ago and much enthusiasm was needed to make it warm and soulful. Mr. Cummings was asked to take over a job that meant many hours of thought and work to establish a school that would merit esteem at its every mention. He has done this for us. A standard has been set in this school that makes us feel a definite sense of pride to know we are a part of it.

Besides the inward growth of our school—besides the improvements and changes that have occurred, the school is beginning to look different to the outsider, too. New and necessary additions are being made so that the outward aspects of George Washington may compare with the inner.

Yes, Mr. Cummings, we are glad you are our principal; we are proud to have one like you. May your future bring you enjoyment of your attainment, and may we sign your journal with the wish that the best of everything be forever yours.

As the Dean of Boys and vice principal since George Washington High School opened its doors three and a half years ago, Mr. William Wieland has given never-ending help and encouragement to many an Eagle boy.

A large part of the credit for the successful term the Student Body has had should go to Mr. Wieland . . . for without his guidance and knowledge of school affairs, many of this term's activity would not have been so successful.

Miss Eleanor Jackson is a faculty member in whom Washingtonians take a great deal of pride. As vice principal and dean of girls, her responsibilities are numerous. Suffice it to say that the extra-fine character of Washington girls is due in large part to her gentle and understanding handling. She is fair and just, and her ideals inspire all of us to strive for the best . . . in school and outside.

The Deans Say...

To the Members of the Class of Fall '39:

You, too, have been pioneering builders, and Washington is a more distinguished school because of your activities here through the three years. It has been a pleasure to have worked with you toward the accomplishment of definite goals and to have observed the development of those traits of character that are essential in human relationships. Now that the time has come for your graduation, there is regret that you must go, but also there is joy in the hope that you are ready for new experiences. Whether these experiences are of further educational endeavors or of business or of industry or of homemaking, the one unequivocal responsibility that lies upon you is to think and to act in those worthy ways that your homes and your school have taught you.

May real success come to each one of you!

ELEANOR M. JACKSON

To the Members of the Class of Fall '39:

Do you remember the story of the little boy in the Kentucky mountains who finished his prayer over his mother's grave with the words "Oh, Lord, I got to ack like a man now?"

Something of the spirit of this resolution must be in the minds of you who are about to finish your school course, and face maturity in a troubled world. With Europe and Asia at war, and the Americas sorely troubled over their domestic problems, our youth must realize that in very truth "they got to ack like men now."

Your task will be very largely to decide whether this country will remain at peace, or go to war; whether our democracy shall succeed in solving this country's problems, or be displaced by another government claiming competence to do so.

George Washington High School hopes that it has prepared you to think and act as responsible American citizens, ready for any eventuality. You are our contribution to the Nation. Serve her well.

WILLIAM A. WIELAND

Mr. Lyons, who handles sales of the Eagle, is a prominent figure in the commercial department, teaching commercial law, typing, shorthand, and bookkeeping.

Aided by a phonograph to enable students to hear the correct pronunciation of the French language, Miss Torrieri is trainer in French.

Usually seen about school wearing an alluring smile, Mr. Hill is a great favorite among math teachers.

Miss Cook is the much-liked and appreciated faculty advisor of the Eagle and the Surveyor. She also is a member of the history department.

Mr. Roberts is a very distinguished history and economics instructor who first entered the mathematics department this term when he began teaching geometry.

An artistic woman, Miss McMillan, who is often seen in a green smock, is a popular art instructor. It is under her supervision that students are trained in the various craft fields.

Miss Coope, actually an English teacher, here examines a new instrument used for testing the pupils' ability to read—a specialty which Miss Coope enjoys practicing.

Mrs. Swanson is the leader of all choral work at school. She heads the advanced, mixed, and girls' choruses. She also is a teacher of many music courses and has brought many honors to the school.

Miss Lockhart is a science teacher and a low junior counselor. Teaching physiology and having a high senior registry, she is a favorite with many upper division students as well as her junior counselees.

Tall and suave, Mr. Pearson is a science teacher of great popularity. Among his subjects are biology and physiology, both of which may prepare students for science majors.

PRESIDENT PAUL BELVEL

Student Leaders

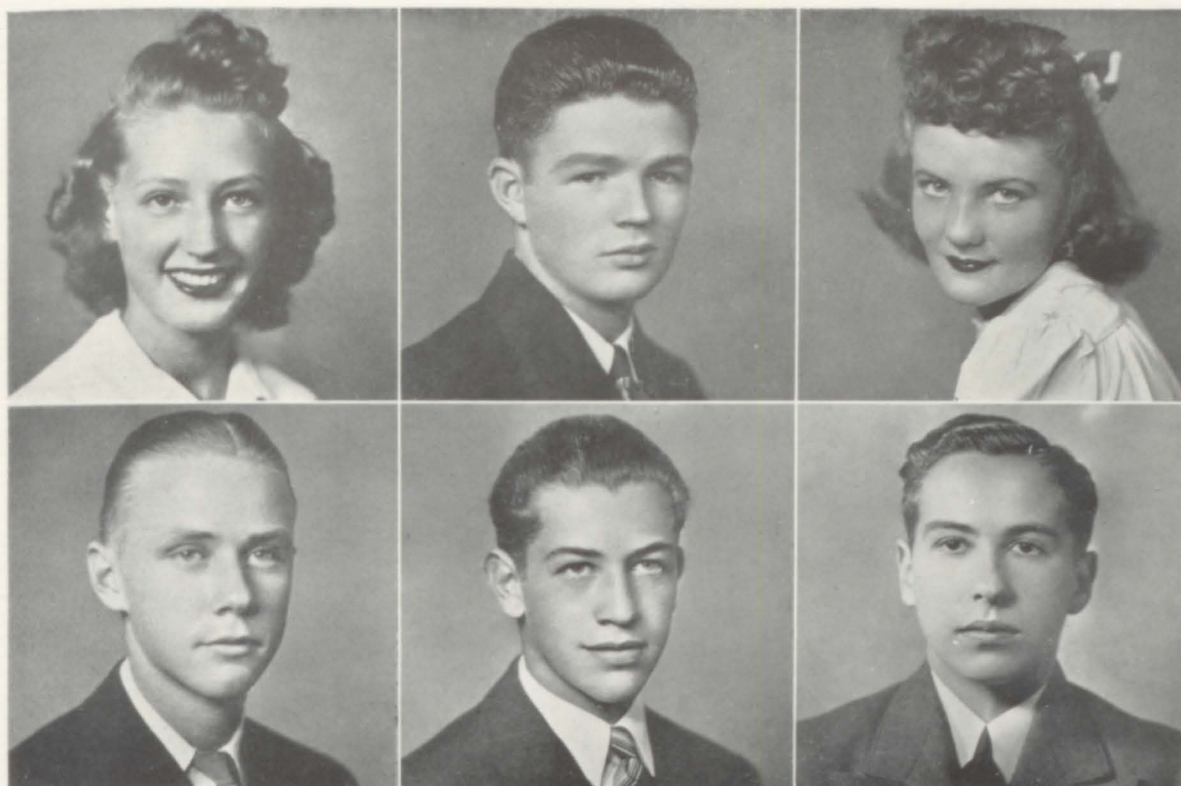

Belief that life at school is preparation for life in the business world, and that a person experienced in living in harmony with a group of his contemporaries is better qualified to be a valuable citizen in later life, has led to the development of student government at Washington under the absolute administration of the students themselves.

Probably the most important single event of this term in respect to student government was the Student Control day held last November 30, first of its kind at George Washington, although last year the seniors set the precedent with their Senior Day. During the Student Control day, all offices of the school were administered by students. The president became the principal and acted with complete authority in all matters that arose; the vice president and treasurer became vice principals, the secretary of the student body took over the duties of the office secretary. In each class room a student was selected to act as teacher for the day, conducting discussions, assigning lessons, giving tests, and in other ways serving exactly as the regular faculty member.

Paul Belvel, prominent in the Reserve Officers Training Corps, most ably led the George Washington student body during the past term in the official position of president.

Social activities of the school were handled by Louise Payne, vice-president. Louise has been a class officer many times during her three years at Washington, and she has been very active in the Girls' Athletic Association and Girls' Service Society. Louise has worked in conjunction with Beverlee Peters, secretary.

Treasurer Don Mavor, member of the Eagle Society, and on the basketball squad, saw that we all became student body members. The sales of the cards were very successful, 1769 having been sold. Ernest Olson, the custodian, kept all our trophies bright and shiny so that we may be proud of displaying them. Walter Goldman was an athletic manager to be proud of, for Washington sold more tickets to the school games than any other high school in San Francisco. Bill Cummins with his two assistants, Pete Garadis and Warren Lowe, instilled pep in our rallies by leading our yells.

The fifth "Hello Day" at George Washington was held under the direction of Vice-President Louise Payne. The day of signing cards and becoming acquainted was climaxed by a dance held on the esplanade at noon. This day celebrated the hottest day of the year, and considering that most students were anxiously awaiting a cold dip, the event was quite successful.

Rallies were held before each football game throughout the term. Visitors from the rival high schools entertained the student body at many of the North Court gatherings.

Other activities included the dance awarded the high seniors for being the first class to be 100 per cent in student body card sales, and the Eagle Society and Girls' Service Society Hal-lowe'en dance.

HIGH SENIOR CLASS

Under the leadership of Gayle Johanson, president; Audrey Ramos, vice president; Ruth Heinsen, secretary; and John Shaughnessy, treasurer, the high senior class had a very successful term.

The Senior-Sophomore reception dance held in the library was a grand success, being the first dance of the fall term. The high seniors were awarded a dance for being the first class to be 100 per cent in the student body card drive. Senior day was celebrated with the Low Seniors. The senior play made possible the financing of the senior dance, held at a downtown hotel.

LOW SENIOR CLASS

Prominent in student activities the past term, the Low Senior class was under the leadership of Albert C. Levy, president; Marjorie Hunter, vice president; Bob McHenry, secretary; and Betty Verleger, treasurer. Elected to the executive council were Eileen Linane and Frances Neece. The main event of the term was Senior Day, when each student dressed as a movie title. After school that day a dance was held in the library.

HIGH JUNIORS

Jack Hickey, president of the High Juniors, was chairman at the Junior Day dance when all the juniors came dressed as some song. Margaret Deakin and Ruth Maltzer were vice president and secretary, respectively. Representatives to the executive council for the fall term were Mary Mangan, John Kockos, and Barbara Keith.

LOW JUNIORS

Capably led by their officers, John Contos, president; Mary Jane Linkins, vice president; Ruth Maltzer, secretary; and John Cleary, Helen Custer and James Phelan as council representatives, the Low Junior class rounded out the term with many activities.

The feature of the term was the Song Hit Day given in conjunction with the High Juniors. Costumes featuring old and new songs were worn and, further to insure a successful day, a rally and dance were held in the morning and afternoon at which everyone had a good time.

The Low Junior theme was to sponsor regular attendance at school and rallies as well as to insure the sale of tickets to games.

HIGH SOPHOMORES

The High Sophomore class has completed a successful term under the leadership of Howard Peterson, president and popular singer. Nathalie Willard was vice president, and Ruth Mangan was secretary. These officers were in charge of many activities, including Safety Day. Representing their class in the executive council were John Ghelfi, Jean Romer, and Lillian Romer.

LOW SOPHOMORES

Leading the low sophomores in their semi-annual clean-up day, were Edward Smith, president; assisted by James O'Brien, vice president; and Pat Simon, secretary. Serving on the executive council were Jean Wallace, Frank Laughery, and William Hughes.

Eagle Society

UPHOLDING ITS AIM of service to the school, the Eagle society, leading boys' organization of Washington, has completed its sixth term of existence.

Under the direction of Mr. Lloyd Leith, club sponsor, the society has had a very successful term, participating in such activities as the Hallowe'en Dance, with the Girls' Service Society, and the semi-annual barbecue, which was held during the latter part of the term.

Officers of the Fall '39 term, who were responsible for the planning of many of the club's activities, were John Shaughnessy, president; Charles Block, vice-president; and Mel Petievich, secretary.

In order that the society might have experienced members to carry on their duties each term, a new plan of admitting members to the Eagle Society was started this term. This new plan reorganized the membership so that each class would have some representation in the society.

Next term, ten new members will replace the graduating seniors who will include Bob O'Neil, Gayle Johanson, Don Mavor, Paul Belvel, Ernest Olson, Joseph Fujimoto, Mel Petievich, Charles Block, John Shaughnessy, and Frank Campbell.

The remaining members who will serve the school in future terms are Tom Clark, John Contos, Louis Demartini, Al Dutil, Dick English, John Ghelfi, Fred Lear, Albert Levy, James Phelan, Bob Schazlein, Arthur Scott, and Don Scranton.

WITH SERVICE TO THE SCHOOL their everlasting aim, the Girls Service Society took part in many activities this term.

Under the sponsorship of Miss Eleanor Jackson, girls' vice principal, this organization admits to membership only girls who have shown that they are capable and have done some service to the school.

The main activities of the society were keeping order in the halls, at rallies, keeping the school grounds clean, and helping other girls. This term a dinner for the members and also a dinner with the alumni was held. The G.S.S. and Eagles sponsored this year's Hallowe'en Dance.

Leading the society this term and presiding at meetings held on the first Monday of every month was Jean Weatherbe, president; Louise Payne, vice president; and Mary Mangan, secretary.

The seven graduating members are: Jean Weatherbe, Louise Payne, Edith Korn, Phyllis Shane, Mary Ninnis, Juanita Scott, and Bonney Dickenson.

The remaining eight members who will carry on the G.S.S. with those new girls elected to take the places of those graduating are: Mary Mangan, Barbara Wilder, Doris Little, Nancy Gallagher, Jean Hosmer, Susan Kuh, Barbara Keith and Leona Asmussen.

Sophomore girls should start right now in rendering service if they wish to belong to this society.

Girls Service Society

Ambition of every girl in school is membership in the G.S.S., since with such membership comes the accolade of every faculty member and every other student. Only those girls who have proved themselves the very best in citizenship and scholarship are elected to membership. Names of girls considered eligible are submitted to the society's nominating committee by teachers or pupils, after which the committee makes a careful investigation of the candidate's qualifications.

The Eagle

The Eagle, the school paper, was edited this term by John Edwards, veteran of the editorial room. Annette Klepper and Arthur Blum assisted in publishing the six issues throughout the term. On the business end of the paper was Kay Rucker, able business manager, and Beverly Cohn, advertising manager. Ebbert Webber was circulation manager, and Claire Leeds was manager of exchanges.

Art Scott was sports editor. Under the direction of these editors were Marie Rozario, Dorothy Danziger, Marilyn Firstenfeld, Florine Levinson, Janice Schark, Bobbie Lee Weidner, Albert Levy, Armand Kirschbaum, Waldo Putzker, Mel Petievich, Bob Sherman, Jean Hamburger, Herbert von Borstel, Richard Wichman, Jeanette Vollmer, Gloria Dengel, Irma Polstorff, George Bozmagian, Stanley Eastman, John Gray, John Knudsen, Wallace Myers, and Deane Oyer. Barbara Slagel and Barbara Wilder contributed articles, the latter as girls sports editor.

In addition to their active participation in the editing of the paper, members of the staff attended two conventions of high school journalists this fall, one at Stanford and one at the University of California.

A special edition of the Eagle was issued free to student body members on Student Control day.

Miss Jane Cook was faculty advisor.

Room 116, better known as the Editorial Sanctum, makes life for journalists easier and more fun. In it they keep their desks, their files, their typewriters, and all the other accoutrements of publication offices. Also from it they exclude all persons not actively engaged on the paper or the journal. People have to be "good" to have 116 privileges.

CIRCULATION STAFF

The Surveyor

The fifth Surveyor was edited by Wallace Myers, assisted by John Knudsen; Al Levy, business manager; Juanita Scott, advertising manager; and Janice Schark, circulation manager. The advertising staff included: Katherine Rucker, Sophie Bauder, Rene Rodigou, Lorraine Lent, Harold Hardy, Amil Tenud, Barbara Delfino, Fern Edilstein, Paul Belvel, Barbara Bennett, Viola Miles, Charles Preston, Dorothy Morris, Audrey Berman, Bob Elliott, Lowell Noonan, Harold Simon, Mel Petievich, Gloria Cervesi, Sheldon Galbraith, and Bernadine Reeves. On the circulation staff are: Milton Rudee, Muriel Kohner, Eleanore Gitschel, Anita Jerichau, and Howard Samuel. Editorial members of the Surveyor staff are: Marie Rozario, Marilyn Firstenfeld, Dorothy Danziger, Claire Leeds, Arthur Blum, Bob Sherman, Waldo Putzker, Jean Hamburger, and Mel Petievich. Robert Coomber and Leland Wenger did the art work.

The Familiar

'Round about school are many of those scenes we talked about in the opening section of this book . . . here to the left is just one of them . . . photographed through the window in the corridor opposite the library . . . those people in the picture . . . just a few of the nearly 2000 students enrolled . . . took time off from watching the rally to "see the birdie" as the cameraman snapped the shutter. Behind them is the nearly completed football field . . . the roofs of a portion of the Richmond District . . . the Golden Gate Bridge . . . and the brown hills of Marin County. At the bottom of the page is one of the most familiar scenes around . . . the front steps at 3:15 . . . or maybe at 3:20 . . . when the first great rush for street cars is over and the Minutemen and gals pause for gay good nights.

and the Strange in School Day Scenes

This has been a nice year . . . with upsets in practically everything . . . including the regular school day . . . Would you believe this if you didn't see it in pictures? Miss Jackson (upper left) gets a pass from Dean of Girls Louise Payne on that now historical occasion, Student Control Day. . . . And what have we here but Student Ernest J. Cummings (upper right) receiving advice and approval from Principal Paul Belvel on a suggestion regarding student business. In the inset Don Mavor, really student treasurer, takes over Mr. Wieland's desk and typical position at the phone, explaining, probably, some school business to a wondering parent. Beverlee Peters looks over his shoulder while she waits for official dictation later. . . . But the administrators' places were not the only ones taken over by erstwhile students. No, indeed. Miss Coope (lower left) submits docilely, as do the rest of the pupils, to a test by the teacher-for-the-day. So does Mrs. Swanson (lower right) who proves that she can take direction as well as give it when it comes to sweet singing.

George Washington Seniors

CARL AAGAARD was an assistant in the chemistry laboratory this term, plans to continue his education, will major in a medical course. JACOB ABOUDARA is interested in all sports, plans to attend Cogswell Trade School where he will take up drafting. ATHENE ABRAMOPOULOS was prominent in dramatics and radio activities, a G. A. A. member for three years, would like to be an actress.

ALBERT BAGOT was very active in the field of music, being a member of the orchestra, the swing band, and the dance orchestra; will attend U.C. EDWARD BARATY was a member of the 130-basketball team, is interested in all sports, is planning to attend the University of California. MYRTLE BARGER assisted low sophs as a senior advisor, was a member of the G.A.A. and also belonged to the Commercial Club.

HARRIETTE ABRAMS was a senior advisor and a member of the G. A. A., plans to attend San Francisco Junior College upon graduation. RAYMOND ALBRECHT was a member of the Fall '39 football squad, plans to continue his education at S.F.J.C. or California. IVA ALLEN thinks that tennis is really a grand game, plans to continue her education at San Francisco Junior College.

JANET BARNEY was the treasurer of the Tri-Y, a member of the girls' Block W society, plans to go to State, would like to be a pianist. MICHAEL BARRETT has a deep interest in all sports; his hobby is photography; ambition is to take up the study of aeronautical engineering. SOPHIE BAUDER was a P.B.X. operator, likes to take her exercise in the form of skating, both roller and ice, and dancing.

JEAN AUERBACH was a senior advisor this term, enjoys playing tennis, is now planning to attend the University of California. Students Meet in Common Interests and develop hobbies, avocations—possible vocations and specialties. They learn, too, that organizations formed under the code of work as well as play give inspiration to their members as how to serve best. Since this is the season during which we feel most strongly the urge to serve our fellow-men, let us turn the following pages to find such things as will go to make our future interests in life.

Master Melodists

The Choral Groups, under the direction of Mrs. Myrtle Swanson, opened their singing season at the War Memorial Opera House where they sang for the Teachers Institute August 25. Other performances were given for the Parent Teachers Association, for the Park Presidio Improvement Club; highlights of many registry period broadcasts were their musical numbers. They will continue their annual custom of caroling in the halls before Christmas and will sing at Commencement.

Orchestra and band have been in charge of Mr. Marion Knott and, although the orchestra's public performances have been few, the members have practiced diligently and will play for graduation. The swing band, under Mr. Knott and student leaders Bill Devou and Stanley Eastman, has done all its rehearsing after school hours and has entertained at all the games and rallies with school songs and popular tunes. The band is shown in the R.O.T.C. pages.

Thespians Thrill Throngs

Activities of the Dramatic and Public Speaking classes have been many and varied. The most outstanding event in the field of dramatics was the presentation of the Senior play on December 13 at Girls' High Auditorium. This play, "The Red Phantom," was first published this fall and George Washington High School was the first school to present it. It is a colorful and fast-moving mystery melodrama of modern times dealing with a group of Americans and Spaniards isolated on an island off the coast of California. Among those taking part were: Howard Nash, Lillian Rado, Beverlee Peters, Allen Myers, Louis DeMartini, Kaye Roeckel, Rottie Reinhart, Franklin Latham, John Shaughnessy, Louis Minkin, Eva Hoffman, Ruth Ellis, Lowell

Noonan, Hal Hardy, John Edwards, Anthony Horn, Pauline Street, Alice Schwartz, Jane Wiman and Dick Tracy. Other activities of the class were a radio version of the play, "Journey's End," presented under the direction of Miss Heaton and Miss Archer and a radio version of the famous "Christmas Carol." Among the activities of the Public Speaking classes were the sending out of student speakers during American Education Week to speak before various civic and educational groups; among those speakers were: Ruth Maltzer, Bob Sherman, and John Shaughnessy. Students who competed in the Native Sons Speaking Contest included: Janet Irvine, Allen Myers, Albert Polonsky, Richard Millwe and Sanford Snow.

SCHOLARSHIP SOCIETY

On the Brighter Side

Scholarship for Service is the motto of the California Scholarship Federation. Chapter 403 of George Washington has been trying to live up to this motto which has become the creed of every one of its members.

A coaching staff made up of volunteers from the society has been organized and students who have trouble with any of their subjects may ask for assistance or may be recommended to the coaching staff by the subject teacher. The staff then appoints a student coach who meets with the student approximately every other day before or after school.

At the end of each term the members of the C.S.F. aid the teachers by making out students' programs for the coming term.

During this term the C.S.F. held its semi-annual district meeting at Treasure Island with Chapter 71C as hostess. At the meeting were speakers on the subject of communication, its effect on scholarship and learning. Dr. Franz Schneider, the "University Explorer," Mr. Linkletter, and most important—to us—Sanford Snow, our president, spoke.

One of the most interesting things the Society did this term was to visit the University of California. During the morning the members were conducted through many of the buildings on the campus and went up to the top of the Campanile. In the afternoon they saw a football game in the famed Memorial Stadium.

In short, Sanford Snow led us through a very successful term during which we have accomplished a great deal. Miss Eleanor Parsons, sponsor of the group, also contributed much to the success of the year.

With an enrollment of over two hundred and fifty cadets, George Washington's R.O.T.C. unit is considered one of the finest in San Francisco. It has built up this reputation by winning top honors in several drills and competitions during the past two years.

This fall, the Washington Battalion entered into competition with six other high school R.O.T.C. units for the Commandant's Cup Award. This competition, held December 8 on our own school grounds, was the most important event of the fall term. It consisted of a regular battalion parade judged by officers of the U. S. Army. Washington won the cup last year and determined to duplicate the achievement.

The George Washington R.O.T.C. Band, under the able direction of Mr. Marion Knott, has participated in all battalion formations and is an important factor in the success of this unit.

The appearance of the battalion has been greatly enhanced by the colorful scarlet and grey cross belts for the band, the color guard and the guidon bearers. Drum Major Bill Walker has acquired a West Point cap to add to his usual snappy appearance. With these improvements, the Washington battalion is one of the best looking units to be found in any high school.

To increase rivalry among companies, a beautiful trophy is awarded each semester to the most outstanding company. The best company in each battalion parade is judged by a board consisting this term of Lieutenant Colonel Robert Dart, Major Paul Belvel, and Captain Herbert Messer. The company having the best record for the term will be presented with the trophy.

Tryouts for the Rifle Team are held every day after school in the armory. The cadets who are selected for the team will enter the matches in the spring. The most promising candidates are Lieutenant Norman Gilbert, and Sergeants Arthur Scott and Harold Emree, all of whom are returning from last year's team.

The crowning achievement of our battalion's success was its standing in the annual Federal Inspection. Washington was rated one of the fourteen highest schools in the Ninth Corps Area and thus won the title of "Honor School." Honor school cadets have the privilege of wearing a small red star on their sleeves.

Sports Lead on to Victory is the cry that makes our school spirit a part of our school life. Athletics form that phase of activity which allows our body to keep up with our minds; sports are opportunities in which we find it easiest to grow in sportsmanship. Correct enjoyment of them is an important factor in determining our future character and quality—the finest gifts we may ever hope to receive, for they benefit not only us, but everyone with whom we come in contact.

Football Season Summary

WASHINGTON 0, JEFFERSON 13

Although the inexperienced Eagle squad made a fine showing, they lost the first game of the season to Jefferson High by two touchdowns.

WASHINGTON 18, ST. IGNATIUS 2

Sparked to victory by the little 145-pound left halfback, Gayle Johanson, Washington piled up three touchdowns to a safety, to defeat a highly favored Wildcat team by 16 points. Johanson came in when the ball rested on the St. Ignatius 18-yard line in Washington's possession, sliced through the right guard for fourteen yards. There the Wildcat's defense stiffened, and finally carried it over from the 1-yard line.

Third touchdown came early in the final quarter on the most spectacular play of the game. With the Eagles well in their own territory, right halfback Jim Finnegan skirted right end and raced 63 yards down the sideline for a touchdown.

WASHINGTON 0, MISSION 0

On a damp and dreary day on a damp and dreary field the Eagles and Bears played to a damp and dreary scoreless tie. Both teams had one scoring chance, and both were halted on the 2-yard line.

Johanson broke loose over left guard. It looked as if he was away, but he was dragged down from behind on the Mission 2-yard line. From there the Eagles ran four plays, gained a grand total of zero yards, and turned the ball over to Mission.

The Bears' chance came in the second quarter when an intercepted pass gave them the ball on the Eagle 11-yard line. They then tried two passes, neither completed. Then two line plunges, after which the ball rested on the 2-yard line, one yard short of a first down.

WASHINGTON 0, COMMERCE 9

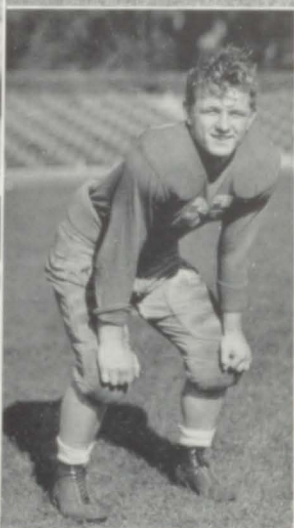

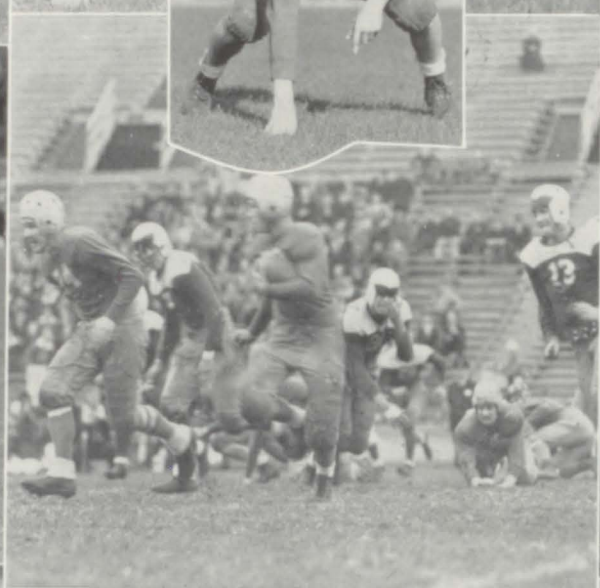

Overpowered by a team that outweighed them almost 20 pounds a man, the Eagles nevertheless fought a gallant battle.

WASHINGTON 0, POLY 24

Hopelessly handicapped by the loss of Finnegan, Horgan, and Newsham, the Eagles didn't have a chance. They did the best they could, gained 29 yards, but lost 26. Poly scored twice in the second quarter and scored twice more in the final period.

WASHINGTON 0, MONTEREY 6

Silent and nervous, the inexperienced Washington second string team came out on the field to meet an equally green and nervous Monterey squad, who thought that they were meeting the Eagle Varsity. After the first few minutes, this nervousness wore off, and both teams played a bang-up game.

Punts and Passes

WASHINGTON 6, LOWELL 33

Kezar Stadium was the scene of a massacre as the rampaging Indians from the Hayes Street reserves rolled right over the defenseless Washingtonians by a score of 33-6.

In the closing minutes of the final quarter the Eagles started to march. Aided by four passes by halfback Bruce Young that totaled 59 yards, the Eagles went 79 yards, Jimmy Bell scoring.

WASHINGTON 6, SACRED HEART 0

Scoring their lone touchdown in the first quarter with Howard Newsham powering it over from the three after a 32-yard march, the Eagles defeated a surprising Fighting Irish eleven.

WASHINGTON 13, PITTSBURG 8

Scoring twice on long drives in the last half, the Minutemen came from behind to upset one of the most powerful prep teams on the coast.

In the third quarter the Eagles began to click. Down the field they went, with Johanson finally going around end to score from the 10. The score remained tied until late in the last quarter.

Then Louie Franz, Eagle quarterback, interrupted a Panther pass and went 20 yards to break the tie. They converted on a pass from Bruce Young and Franz.

The Panthers scored two points when the Minutemen, backed up to their own goal line, gave them an automatic safety.

WASHINGTON 6, GALILEO 7

A last quarter pass and a perfect kick spelled a one-point margin of victory for the Galileo Lions in a game that was truly a heartbreaker for Washington. The Eagles scored in the first quarter on a fumbled punt, with Howard Newsham smashing over from the one-foot line.

WASHINGTON 0, BALBOA 14

On a slippery field that practically stalled their ground attack, the Eagles lost to the vastly more powerful Balboa Buccaneers. This game was the final appearance of such players as Bob O'Neil, Lionel Viales, Ed Schulman, Bruce Young, Ray Ham, Ernest Ribera, Bill Brown, and Howard Newsham.

Plans and Plays with an entirely new kind of play day. A triangular play day between Polytechnic, Lowell, and George Washington was held October 26. The girls played basketball, badminton, baseball, and ping pong, and a good time was had by all. General chairman of the day was Bonnie Dickenson. Her committees were headed by: arrangements, Betty Levy; officials, Martha Maghakian; reception, Janet Barney; publicity, Edith Berkovich; name tags, Louise Horne.

Flash!—About a splash! Washington mermaids have certainly been cutting ice, I mean water, at the "Y" pool this term. The captains were Jean Kriens, of the divers; Dot Reinhart, of the stokers; and Georgette Darracq, of the dog-paddlers. Then we must not forget who taught them, Miss Margaret Poole.

Something new was offered this term in the way of exercise (and I do mean exercise). It was the formation of a Bike Club. Under the sponsorship of Mrs. Lillian Clayton and the management of Marge Hunter, the club rolled into a lot of fun and laughter.

Horse lovers galore turned out this term, making the largest riding group in several semesters. The girls did very well this time under the sponsorship of Miss Margaret Poole, riding at the San Francisco Riding Academy. Manager of the advanced group was Barbara Sumski and of the beginners, Betty Verleger.

Mrs. Margaret Denny sponsored advanced tennis this term, and Susan Kuh was manager of this group.

Feminine Sportsmen

The intermediate tennis group under the supervision of Miss Florence Shearer and the management of June Kline also enjoyed themselves.

Miss Dorothea Forcade with Manager Fay Brierley took charge of forty beginning tennis players.

The two groups of basketball, the beginning under the sponsorship of Miss Florence Shearer and management of Janet Rosenberg, and the advanced under Miss Dorothea Forcade and Sophie Ellis, had fun playing off round robin tournaments.

The Ice Follies of Washington skated this term at Winterland Ice Rink. Mrs. Margaret Denny and Manager Muriel Weiner were in charge of the group.

Swing hit a new high this term at Washington. I mean the swing of a golf stick. There was a very large turn-out under the leadership of Mrs. Lillian Clayton. Janet Irvine was the manager.

And now comes the good news! The annual Banquet will be held next January 10, with Doris Little as the general chairman. Her committees are as follows: arrangement, Winifred Biehl; art, Amy De Turk; publicity, Claire Morse; entertainment, Carman Burke; clean-up, Christina Pantaleon; and reception, Bonnie Dickenson. Mrs. Lillian Clayton is general sponsor. We're all looking forward to that dinner.

One of the most active organizations in the G. A. A. is the girls' Block "W" Committee. They sponsored a very successful play day, and a skating party to which the G. A. A. board was invited. Bonnie Dickenson is president of this group of twenty members, Phyllis Shane, vice president and Helen Price, secretary.

So hail to the G. A. A. May it reign forever.

Pointing to the layout of the coming Eagle are Arthur Blum, Marie Rozario, Annette Klepper, and John Edwards. Also at work are Ebbert Webber, Art Scott, John Knudsen, Wally Myers, Stanley Eastman, and Jean Hamburger. Although some of the students are on the Surveyor staff, they also help out with the writing of articles, and enjoy helping with the layout. These are the people responsible for the excellent semi-monthly publication, the official school newspaper. Miss Jane Cook supervises both the Eagle and the Surveyor.

English is a required subject for two of our three years at high school. The lower picture shows a corner of Miss Margaret Heaton's English classes seeking references in preparation for future recitation. Miss Heaton is one of the two English A teachers here. English A prepares students for the subject A examination required for college entrance. Many different English courses are available during the senior year, although none are required.

Spanish is one of the most popular foreign languages offered at George Washington. About as many students take it as take French, and it compares favorably with Latin and German. The lower picture shows a student holding the attention of a Spanish class as she points to a place on the map to illustrate a report. Around the walls of the room are scenes from Spanish life, pictures of Spanish costumes and other scenes representing Spain.

Four students of Mr. Roberts' fifth period geometry I class stand at the board during one of their regular recitation periods. They really seem to know the angles, and they go right ahead proving that DC equals EC ; AB equals DB , and what not, far better than we can ever expect to do. But then, geometry is logical when you look at it from the standpoint of a geometry teacher. If a dotted line is dropped from the top of a triangle, it stands to reason, if, of course, you have this viewpoint which may prove very valuable in later life, that this dotted line should eventually reach the bottom.

Room 138 was the scene for this picture. It is a bookkeeping class. Students learn to balance books and keep accounts. From what we know about it, to make your books balance is quite a job—and many a person credits his white hair to his inability to acquire identical readings on the debit and credit sides. These students may some day be important cogs in the machinery of the commercial world.

The lower picture shows Mr. Hill's algebra class in action. During a recitation period, students took to the blackboards and worked problems dictated to them. We think that blackboard drill is good because it gives the other members of the class as well as the teachers a chance to see where the difficulties in solving the problems lie. Then they can be corrected before a test strikes. Algebra is one of the most widely taught math courses in school. For a math major, algebra I and II are the first maths taken in high school as a rule, and precede geometry for college preparatory work.

Going Places?

The fellows and girls who are going places in this world don't wait or wish for things to happen—they start now to bring them about.

Take money matters, for example. The young men and women who are going places don't just wish for success—they form habits of success now, by saving systematically.

There's no easier way to form habits of success than to join The Anglo Bank Savings Club in your school and save something each week.

Beginning physicists here are calculating the displacement of water. With much of the finest working materials, Washington's Physics laboratory is equipped to carry on many fine experiments. Weights and balances, and everything from rocks to oscilloscopes, may be found in it. Mr. James Ripley is the teacher of most physics classes in school. Physics I is mainly the study of matter in motion and properties of matter, while physics II is concerned with sound, light, and electricity.

The shops, as well as the science laboratories at George Washington High, are possessed of the finest and newest equipment. In this picture Mr. Rex Harris, instructor, is supervising the class while they wind coil to be used in any number of things; radios, electro-magnets, telephones, telegraph sets, et cetera. Mr. Harris teaches the boys the mechanism of all electrical appliances, explains circuits, and trains boys ably in this field.

In this science class conducted by Mr. Seymour Pearson, the students at the work table are studying slides to record their findings in their books. The girls in the background are studying the mounted specimens made by ex-physiology and biology students. The mounts compare beaks, legs, and wings of many different types of birds; they illustrate types of leaves and flowers. Many organisms preserved inside alcohol-filled bottles offer interesting details to inquirers.

In the home economics class, girls make dresses, skirts, blouses, and other apparel. The girl at the extreme right is being measured to see how the dress she made fits. The rooms are surprisingly neat, and many good looking clothes are turned out by these young dressmakers. Yards and yards of material are turned into products almost professional in appearance, under the supervision of the sewing teachers.

In the middle picture, we see a very intelligent young lady selling Eagles to sales class students, a rather remarkable achievement, proving that Washingtonians are always anxious to read the school newspaper. The Eagles are distributed during registry period, six issues having been issued this term. The paper, put out by the students in the journalism class, is rated very high among high school newspapers throughout the country.

The lower picture shows a machine calculating class. The machines are very expensive and detailed, and students learn the value of such machines, as well as their operation. This is a good course for a student preparing to do office work or accountancy after graduation. George Washington has a well equipped commercial department enabling students to work with the same kinds of machines used in actual business.

There was one noon day dance this term which was held on the esplanade in the north court. Students munched and danced to recorded music and enjoyed the noon time revelry. It rejuvenated the participants for the afternoon classes, and made them wish for more similar occasions.

Most of the rallies held this term were conducted in the north court. Here is a scene during one of the rallies. Rallies pep up the student body before the games, provide entertainment, and are always a welcome feature in our school life. We hear from the faculty as well as the students and in this way get to know each other better than we otherwise would. Comedy is usually appreciated, especially when Bob McHenry and Tim Connors cut up in front of the student body. They are among the favorite entertainers for their appropriate comedy. Singers always manage to make the audience dream and are also great favorites. Guests from the outside world and other schools' student body officers and football players are invited and introduced to all present at the rally. This term all the rallies were held during the third period.

Our inter-room broadcasting system provides many students of school with radio experience. Plays and programs of different kinds are presented for the students' pleasure and education. The top picture shows members of the radio group rehearsing for the next day's broadcast. The boy with the gong in his hand is Jack Taylor, official school announcer. Scripts are prepared and edited by the students themselves. Most of the work is under the direction of the dramatics department.

Washington has a rifle range which is adjacent to the R.O.T.C. office. Seen in the middle picture is a student target-practicing. Aside from the training given to the R.O.T.C. members, the Rifle Club also uses the range. If, all of a sudden, we hear a hollow sort of sound coming from somewhere in the basement, we may be quite sure that it is the rifle squad at work. The R.O.T.C. is privileged to have this range to practice on.

George Washington is the possessor of a very efficient traffic squad, under the direction of Mr. Donald Atherton. The squad is made up of two divisions: the indoor and the outdoor squad. The indoor squad, composed of girls, patrol the corridors and the stairs during the two main lunch periods. The outdoor squad, composed of boys, takes care of the street crossings, prevents jaywalking and directs traffic. In the lower picture, they are seen marching down Thirty-second Avenue after completing their duties on the street corners. Mr. Atherton salutes his charges. Credit for one unprepared subject is given for every six months of service.

All through the day singing may be heard in any room facing the south court. This originates in room 236, Washington's choral room. We think that singing is lots of fun, and here we see some of our students taking their fun seriously. Under the direction of Mrs. Myrtle Swanson, members of the voice classes have sung at many rallies and special occasions. They will also sing at the graduation.

Taken in late October, this view of our stadium shows one of the first loads of soil to arrive. Now it is nearly finished. This structure, seating about 5000 people, will be used for all our football games when completed. Pictures showing projects under construction are always interesting because they can never be seen the same again. Take your last look at the scaffolds, steam shovels, and paint buckets, for they will soon be gone.

Teaching French by a phonograph is the method being used in the language class shown in the lower picture. These French students are learning the pronunciation of French by hearing it on the record. A student points to a chart showing different pieces of furniture in the room which the pupils identify.

Journal time means journal pictures, and these journalism students were on duty to take the names of all students photographed for clubs and registries. It was also this staff that recorded payment of dimes, the fee for each picture, and saw that the name of each student was printed in the journal in the correct place. Registry photographs were taken on one day, and clubs on another.

When all registry and club pictures were finished, the backboards that were placed in front of the main entrance to serve as a background were taken down. Wally Myers, Charlie Block, Tom Clark, Ernie Olson, John Kockos, and John Contos posed for this picture in celebration of the completion of the outdoor group pictures. Beautiful weather (the first day of the heat wave) made pictures go smoother on the day that club pictures were taken.

Mr. Ted Ellsworth is the man who takes most of the pictures for the journal. He was the man behind the camera for the pictures described above, as well as for most of the other pictures in the book. Here he was snapped while covering the Commerce game at Kezar stadium. Students see him all around school—in the cafeteria, halls, and classrooms, snapping interesting subjects for publication. We think that he is about the finest cameraman we know, and thank him for the swell pictures he has taken.

The senior advisors are the high seniors who have organized themselves into a body for the purpose of helping the low sophomores and instructing them as to the ways of the new school. Several times throughout the term, these seniors visit their sophomores—each senior has four designated to him—and try to advise them in whatever way they can. They often act as primary counsellors, answering questions that would otherwise have to be referred to the counsellors. The group has been quite successful thus far. The above picture was taken at an early morning meeting they conducted recently.

Culture of the Nations is an upper division prepared subject taught by Mrs. Birdeena Gowan, who invented the whole course, and has received recognition for her work in Washington, D. C., and various other cities throughout the United States. Mrs. Gowan is focusing the slide machine in the second picture. Pictures showing different views and scenes of Europe are shown the students who very much appreciate the course.

Mr. Abercrombie is explaining different parts of a model automobile to his auto shop students in the third picture. Auto shop is a very popular unprepared subject at school. Several automobile corporations have sent model automobiles such as the one shown so that students may actually see how the new models are being constructed. Movies are frequently shown, and the instruction is thorough. Machines and cranks make the auto shop look interesting to the visitor, and to the student it is more than interesting; it is understandable.

Many seniors take physiology in preference to other sciences in their senior year. Pointing to the chart showing the functions of the heart is one of Mrs. Frances Wagstaff's physiology students. The pupils are looking on with interest for they are eager to learn the subject. The school department has furnished many charts showing the uses and functions of the body. If we are not certain of what to expect when we enter these east wing third floor rooms, we may be greatly shocked to find ourselves staring face to face with a skeleton!

Future draftsmen and engineers are being trained in our mechanical drawing rooms. The room is furnished with drawing boards and a certain amount of equipment, but the students must furnish their own tools. Mr. Donald Atherton and Mr. Orville Taylor are the instructors of the course. Plans for houses, boats, and even bridges are drawn up in these classes. The students learn to print letters as well as draw plans and make blue prints.

Some of the courses offered in school train the student in handicrafts as well as in academic ability. One of the most interesting of these classes is Miss Doris McMillan's seventh period design class which has been making textiles as well as wood blocks which are stamped on cloth. Some very interesting designs result. We think that art is lots of fun and hear that it is enjoyed very much by the students who take it.

Part of the fun of school life is the fun we get when we dress ourselves in odd and unusual costumes, come to school, and compete for the prize awarded to the person wearing the best—usually the most typical or funny—costume. The top picture shows a scene taken on the platform of the stage at the Junior Day rally. Seen are many of the students dressed to represent some song title, the theme of the day.

Early in the term, the seniors posed for their pictures for this Surveyor. Here is Howard Nash all set for his picture that appears in the book. Mr. Dougherty, the photographer, took pictures of student body officers, all class officers, Eagle Society and G.S.S. members, and seniors. Each picture required about three minutes and all together, they took three days. Fifty-two cents was charged for each person, and not many students had to be "put on the cuff."

The not-too-sad looking person who is in the pitiful state of being in a stock is Herb Messer. The reason for his being so treated was his failure to purchase a Hello Day Card, which he now seems securely to hold in his right hand. John Contos stands over him as the executioner. All who failed to buy a card were given the same punishment. The Hello Day dance was held when school was dismissed at noontime due to the heat. Those who didn't head for the cool beaches and pools remained at school to make the day a success.

"Well, if you want my picture, okey, but hurry up . . . there seems to be something interesting over on my right!!" says George O'Neil as he sits next to Helen Caravellas. Jack Hickey and the young lady seem to see something far more interesting than a camera man . . . for they're not even looking at him. This is a typical noon-time scene around our campus . . . sociability with scholarship . . . that is the keynote of Washington High.

The bell rings . . . doors open hurriedly . . . the school comes to life . . . lockers slam shut . . . and Washington High is again going out to lunch!! This Thursday (note the R.O.T.C. uniforms) is but a typical day around Washington when it comes to eating . . . Washington is never outclassed in that activity.

"What's so interesting, Don?" asked Margie Deakin of Don Scranton as they sit enjoying a noon-time siesta. (Ed. note: Yes, what was it, Don?) Whatever he sees, it certainly doesn't interest those two co-eds in front of them . . . for them it's just a tete-a-tete. (Ed. note: Mind if we cut in . . . it sounds interesting!!) Now we know why Don is surrounded (well, practically) by women . . . it's his Eagle Society Cap!

Football is the main sports event of the fall season. The scenes on this page were taken at one of the league games Washington played. The upper picture shows a group of the grandstand rooters who have just become excited over a Washington touchdown. Many tickets were sold to each game, and the attendance was good. The band was present at most games, and their songs helped to encourage the players on the field, and give encouragement to the rooters in the stands.

Official league timer, Mr. A. J. Fagin keeps his eye on the stop-watch, ready to fire the gun, making it known that the game has become sports history. Announcing the end of each quarter in this manner, Mr. Fagin is as much of value to the team as the players themselves and the coach.

Head of the athletic department at George Washington, Mr. Fagin also coaches our tennis teams.

Many is the time that the final gun has prevented a touchdown or a field goal and has decided not only the game but a possible championship. All the league games this year were held at Kezar stadium in Golden Gate Park, where this picture was taken. There is a big scoreboard timer that informs the players and the bleachers how much time there is left to play in the quarter, but it is with his own stop-watch that the timer calls the end.
