Heritage

As California celebrates this year the one hundredth anniversary of the famed Gold Rush, it is also fitting to observe at this time another earlier phase of the State's colorful, historical background — the early missions.

These humble, adobe monuments, whose influence we now realize and cherish, are rich in heritage and culture and are a living tribute to the early California settlers. These comparatively small structural beginnings, great, however, with fervor and strength, give us a concept of the early life of California.

We are aware of these early events as we consider the importance of the "Role of the Early Missions in the founding of the State of California"—the theme for this, the 1949 Mission Journal.

Dear Paul
It was really fun having you as a classmate both here and at James Lick. Hope our friendship will continue.
Joan Carr

Lots of luck to a really good head. Hope to see you in the Club
next year.

Dear Paul;

I hope that our junior class will stay as sweet and nice and unexcited as you are because after all you represent the whole junior class. I've had a lot of fun this year Paul but I think our senior year will be even better. Maybe we can get together some time Paul I still have to show you my pretty dress that I finally finished making

Lore

TWO BLOCKS FROM MISSION HIGH School stands Mission Dolores—a living monument to the gallant padres who founded it. It was in this vicinity that these pioneers sought to teach the ideals they believed in. Faith, culture, and education were all a part of their program in furthering their ideas of sympathetic brotherhood and understanding. More important than what the early pioneers actually did, perhaps, was what they endeavored to do—for all peoples and for the future. The California missions are now landmarks of one of the most momentous adventures in recorded history. Mission High School somewhat resembles one of these early missions, not only in structure, but also in activity and in spirit. To this undying spirit that is Mission High School today, this book is dedicated.

Mr. Alvin L. Morse, known to Mission for many years, came back to Mission High last fall—this time as principal. The man who, as acting vice-principal for one year, guided and helped many Mission students was called to fill the vacancy left by Mr. Louis G. Conlan who was promoted to the position of Coordinator of Secondary Education for the San Francisco Unified School District. An ardent proponent of social and extra curricular activities, Mr. Morse has encouraged activities for all students.

Mr. Morse is always interested in students and their affairs. "The doors to my office are never closed. I shall always be glad to hear from any student," he once said. Perhaps this is why students frequently call upon him, whether it be in conjunction with student body business or personal problems. Perhaps this is why students respect and know him as the true friend that he is.

Dear Paul,
 Lots of luck
 to a really swell guy and I hope you in our reg. next term.
 Jill Pearson

administration

Mission is fortunate in having two vice-principals whose experience and helpfulness have set many a student on the right track or on the road to success. Mrs. Lena O'Neil, Dean of Girls, and Mr. Joseph B. Newman, Dean of Boys, spend a good deal of their valuable administrative time in this work, but they both manage to find time to support the active school spirit that is Mission. Programming something like 2,100 Mission students, and giving them counseling and advice to prepare them for future jobs is the work done by head counselors Mrs. Thelma Baxter and Miss Adeline Scandrett.

Mrs. Lubeck, Mrs. Swanson, Mrs. Elder and Mr. Castellino of the English department meet to discuss a new test program.

Mission students are proud of their eighty-nine member faculty—and they have every reason to be proud of it. For Mission's competent faculty members give valuable training in all basic subjects to all students, as well as offering them proper training in the large number of important vocational courses. The services and duties of these teachers do not end with the close of the school day, however, for much of their work extends into the after and before school hours in the supervision of extra-curricular activities.

Messrs. Roberts, DeSousa, Terry, Crane and Taylor hold a conference to plan a new unit of work for the science department.

A new method in cutting out patterns is probably what Mrs. Reedy (center) is explaining to Mrs. Bartram (right) and Miss Nordholz (left) of the home economics department.

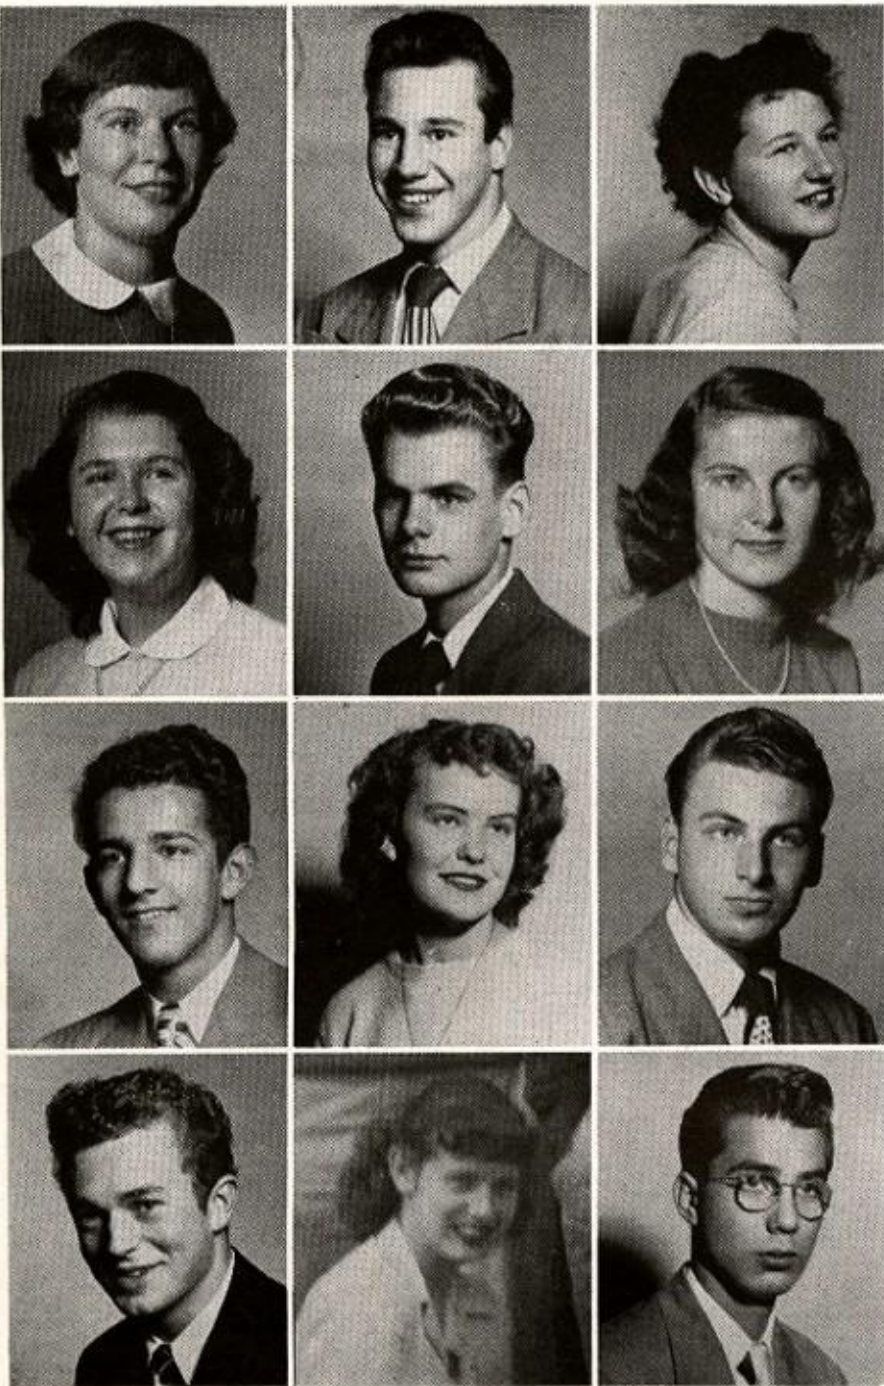

A new calculating machine in the commercial department gets a thorough going over from Mr. Gates, Mrs. Allen, and Mr. Barney.

Miss Fredericks, Mrs. Saudino, and Mr. Galeno study a map of Mexico, one of the language department exhibits for the Public School's Week program.

heritage of service

The service rendered by the founders of the state's 21 missions is a remarkable record. Serving others was their job. Today, a service record such as theirs is much more difficult to accomplish in this unsettled world. Seniors, however, are preparing themselves by means of a broad education, to help themselves understand clearly the problems and duties they must face later in their life as adult citizens. It will be then that their real job of service will begin.

heritage of friendship

The missions, center of community life, promoted harmonious good will and understanding. This same idea holds true today at Mission where students go about their daily routine with an air of friendliness toward everyone. Helping to stimulate this warm-hearted feeling are a number of organized clubs and other groups which are open to all the student body. Equally important in carrying out the theme of friendship are the registry classes.

The first schools of California were the missions, the small adobe buildings dotting the coastline of California. In size they did not compare with our modern schools where students work in classrooms, shops, laboratories, gymnasias, and study halls and where the meaning of a full education is exemplified. But in spirit there is little difference. Mission's academic program is complete and prepares students for further education and full-time jobs.

heritage of culture

Art, music, and literature were three of the cultural contributions made by the padres of the missions. Without a doubt, they are also three of the most important and popular subjects taught at Mission today. Many phases of these three areas of appreciation, such as drama, the crafts, journalism, debating, and all fields of music, are not considered as extra curricular activities. They are beneficial in that they prepare students for possible future careers, as well as rounding out their personalities.

"H.M.S. Pinafore," one of the most popular of the works by the famed composers, Gilbert and Sullivan, was the annual spring operetta offering by Mission's music department. After weeks of gay rehearsals and long hour practice schedules, the production was warmly received by spirited and appreciative audiences during the three days it was presented. A dual cast of leading characters was selected to share performance honors. The quality of the many unusually fine voices drew favorable comment from the audiences as did the acting and production numbers. Mr. George D. Ingram, head of the music department, conducted the orchestra and production from the pit. Miss Isabelle C. Becker was in charge of the soloists as well as the chorus.

The cast of leading characters in one of the colorful scenes from "Pinafore."

She directed the musical from her position backstage. The work of presenting the operetta itself was done largely through the combined efforts of the various school departments. Many of the colorful costumes, and much of the effective stage sets were made by students. Publicity, make-up, lighting and other jobs associated with the operation of a production of this size, were carried out effectively and professionally by both students and faculty.

After an absence of three years, the term play was revived at Mission by the drama class under the direction of Mr. Kenneth Castellino. For the first presentation Norman Krasna's two-act comedy, "Dear Ruth," was chosen.

A large audience filled the auditorium for the night performance and shared the fun and entertainment provided by a befuddled soldier (Jim Bogue) in love, an un-knowing spouse-to-be (Navonne Pettersen), and an infuriating adolescent (Liz Tsatsos). The antics of the mother (Vivian Perry) and the father (Doug Hayward) were indeed hilarious as they tried desperately to ease the confusing situation.

Deadlines, sales, copy, prints, proofs, layouts, dummies, cuts, and the hundreds of other words that make up the yearbook staff's vocabulary, was common talk during the process of producing the 1949 Mission Journal.

From the selection of the theme to the final paste-up, Journal Editor Bob Rezak and his staff worked together in close harmony, striving for neatness and accuracy in all work connected with the book.

Business Manager Betty O'Connell kept one eye on prospective advertisers and the other on her staff of salesmen, upon whose shoulders rested the job of financing the book. Betty's job was not to hear the plaintive cries, which were frequent, of her staff's difficulties in selling. Her only word was "results!" Staffer Ellsworth Thompson took this word seriously as he brought in an average of one ad a day during the whole campaign, thus making him top salesman for 1949.

Having conquered their problems, the 1949 Journal staff was able to enjoy their annual banquet at the end of the term with the satisfaction of knowing that their job was completed.

Music is a subject that always enjoys a tremendous popularity among practically all Mission students. This fact is evidenced by the large number of students who take an active part in the music department's activities. This department, under supervision of Mr. George D. Ingram (head) and Miss Isabelle C. Becker, offers excellent musical training in any of the following classes: girls' glee, boys' glee, harmony, junior band, senior orchestra, and the A Capella Choir, which is widely acclaimed for its outstanding work.

This group has sung, throughout the past year, at the Civic Auditorium during the Portola Festival, for the P.T.A., at various other schools, and at numerous Christmas and holiday programs. Their one big event of the year was in presenting "H.M.S. Pinafore," the annual spring operetta. The instrumental groups played for school assemblies, the operetta, Portola Festival programs, and supported school spirit by playing at football games during the season. They also provided the music for the graduation ceremonies. The music department has also helped particularly talented students develop their skill for future work in the professional music and entertainment world.

Despite increased costs in the various services connected with publishing a high school newspaper, the Fall, 1949 West Wing staff, headed by Editor Bob Rezak, managed to produce its usual quota of papers.

Planning pages, making assignments, editing copy, and writing headlines, besides a constant trek to and from the printers, was the work which Bob Rezak and Managing Editor Gloria Monina experienced in the course of "getting out the paper."

For the staff there were assignments to cover, stories to be written, and advertising to be solicited.

There were the usual number of headaches getting the new Spring West Wing staff as Co-Editors Don Towne and Joan Robinson and their staff took over publication duties and responsibilities.

Special emphasis was placed on more and fresher news for the school and it was not long before the staff adjusted themselves to the routine of newswriting. Editors Towne and Robinson also supervised more complete coverage on school clubs and organizations. This received popular approval from student readers.

The staff covered their typewriters for the term after they put out the traditional senior edition, complete with cartoon.

In the trail blazing days of the California missions, important emphasis was placed on physical fitness and the well being of the people. Although these pioneers were not familiar with any of the popular forms of athletics that we enjoy today, they realized the importance of healthy exercise in building strong bodies. This is the work being carried out by the physical education classes and on the athletic teams at Mission today.

Things were different on the Mission football front this year. For the first time in the history of the AAA, the junior varsity team had a separate inter-school conference. They were coached by Coach Charles Schefflin. Baseball Coach George Wolfman was in charge of the sophomore teams. Another satisfactory factor was a successful varsity team. Although the Bears didn't take a title, they were one of the league's most improved squads, a fact that attracted many spectators to their games. With the fall '48 football season officially recorded in the books, Coach Alex Schwarz put his 1949 hopefuls through spring practice on the new sod of Drew Field in the middle of May.

bear grid season wins cheers

For the first time since the hallowed days of the Klotovich brothers, Mission fielded a football team that was respected and powerful in A.A.A. competition. Although they did not win a championship, the Bears fought mighty Poly to two low scoring losses and were acclaimed as the best Mission team since the happy days of 1936.

Mission's line was big and hard to move and the backs were fast and tricky. Coaches Alex Schwarz, Milt Reiterman, and Turk Terzian gave the boys superior coaching, and when the season started the Bears were counted on to end Poly's long and triumphant reign. Living up to their advance notices, the Bruins hacked Balboa, 19-0, in the season's opener. They looked even better when smashing through a weak Washington squad, as they scored a 37-6 victory. The experts began to take notice of the growling Bears' claim to the championship when they blasted an inferior Lowell team, 25-0.

The prep titanic of the season was eagerly awaited by the fans, and Poly and Mission rewarded their faithfulness by engaging in a donnybrook that saw Poly's throne totter, but not fall, in a 12-6 win for the Parrots. Although beaten by Poly, the Bruins roared back and easily conquered an inept Galileo team, 28-0.

Having hit their peak too soon, the Bears slid downhill following the Galileo game. Although they squeaked by Sacred Heart, 13-6, they found the going harder. The Irish fought Mission tooth and nail and until the last quarter the issue was in doubt. Looking forward perhaps to their next meeting with Poly, the Bears were upset by their crosstown rivals, Commerce, 7-0, in a game that shocked the fans.

In the semi-finals of the A.A.A. playoffs the Bears drew Poly and once again prep followers streamed into Kezar Stadium to watch the game. Following almost the same script of their previous meeting, the two outfits engaged in another rough game. Poly scored first and led in the game well into the fourth period. An intercepted pass by Mission gave the Bruins a touchdown. Playing with the chips down, the Parrots roared back in the last two minutes and eked out another 12-6 win. Don Sessions, Joe Scudero, and big Bob McBride were chosen All-City.

A mediocre team, coupled with an unusual run of hard luck gave Mission one of the less successful basketball teams in recent years. With several players sidelined because of CIF rulings and injuries, Coach Lloyd Leith's cagers wound up in sixth place, out of the first division for the first time since 1944. Unable to find the range of the bucket in their first three games, the Bears finally copped a win from Washington in mid-season. Following the Washington game, the Bears shook off the doldrums and beat St. Ignatius for their second win in a row.

Continuing in their listless fashion, Leith's basketball team dropped a wild game to defending champion Lincoln, 38 to 25. A CIF ruling that prohibits AAA players from participating on outside teams forced Leith to declare star forward Dick Greenberg ineligible. Greenberg, one-time prep of the week, had played with the San Francisco Boys' Club team. Greenberg's loss hurt the Bears' chances for a first division berth and Mission continued to lose ball games in an efficient manner.

Lack of height was another factor which robbed the Bruins of winning their share of ball games. Small men like Tom Quinn, Mickey Lee, and Jim Dougherty, couldn't cope with the superior height of other teams in the league.

Jim Dougherty managed to top all of the Bears in the scoring department, despite his lack of height. Guard Dougherty hit the basket for a total of 43 points in the nine AAA tilts. On opening day, against Balboa, the Bears' starting lineup looked something like this: Tom Quinn, Jim McNeil, forwards; Perry Georgallis, center; and Jim Dougherty and Dick Greenberg, guards.

They followed the pattern again this year. In the fall Poly walloped opposing football teams; in the winter months, Lowell swept to the basketball title; and in the spring, Mission took the AAA baseball championship for the twelfth straight time in 22 years. These perennial title holders consistently have won crowns in their athletic fields. The Bear nine, well stocked with returning veterans, were considered the team to beat when the bell rang for the start of the season. Not up to the high standard set by the past Bruin teams, this year's club finished in third place when the regular season ended. Their record stood at a six won, three lost score. Yet, when the chips were down, Coach George Wolfman's men swept the S.I. Wildcats aside in a row in the semi-finals and then went on to whip the Balboa Bucs twice in the finals. The championship marked the third year in succession that Mission grabbed the AAA gonfalon. In the semi-finals against the Wildcats, the Bears used long distance slugging power to run the Hilltoppers into the ground. In the opening game, Mission, aided by Wildcat errors and wild pitchers, blasted S.I., 12 to 1.

Al Barni, all city first baseman, smashed a home run in the sixth to lead the Bears' attack. In the second contest, the Brown and Gold outfit continued using the home run play. Doyle Akins socked a pitch for a homer to widen the Bears' winning margin. Concluding their play the Bruins downed dangerous Balboa in the finals in two fairly close tilts. Mission won the first game, 8 to 3, and annexed the title with a 5 to 4 triumph in the clincher. Three Mission athletes were named to the All-City teams. An era came to an end last term. For the first time in something like a decade, the Mission High soccer team failed to win the AAA title. Coached by Glenn Haas, the Bears lost their chance for another flag when they were edged out by Washington in the finals.

All told, thirteen veterans returned to the soccer wars and were highly instrumental in aiding the Bruins for their second place finish. A wealth of material gave Haas plenty of opportunity to field a good squad. The Bears won four, tied two, and lost one.

Under the command of Sgt. Rossie B. Ammons and Master Sgts. Hemphill and Kemp, Mission's R.O.T.C. unit was honored by placing second in the first annual company competition for the San Francisco High Schools, which was sponsored by the 91st Infantry Division, and held May 13. For the fifth consecutive time, Mission was also awarded the "Honor School" rating, the highest honor any R.O.T.C. high school unit can win. Cadet Commander for the fall term was Lt. Col. John Vassar. The Cadet Commander for the spring term was Lt. Col. Ray Lenormand.

Some fast action as the junior and senior girls compete for the basketball championship.

girls' sports

The large number of girls who turned out for after school sports was greater than had been anticipated last term. As a result, the girls' physical education department, under the direction of Miss Lenore Davidson, put into effect a wide variety of activities for all girls. Participants in the program were required, by the Girls' Executive Board, to buy a student body card, maintain a C average and a satisfactory citizenship record on their report cards.

team, supervised by Miss Mulcahy, and tramped out to the bowling alleys each week to test and develop their skill in the sport. Equally devoted was the Crop and Saddle Club, headed by June Dukes, president, and guided by Mrs. Milliken. The club garbed in their fashionable riding clothes and boots, met weekly and enjoyed horseback rides through Golden Gate Park. Miss Bassett's modern dance class taught girls the fundamentals of ballet and modern dance.

Swimming and ice skating made their introduction into the abundant sports program last term, both as newcomers. They achieved great popularity among the interested girl athletes who readily joined the formed teams. Badminton, volleyball, basketball, and softball rounded out the sports season in which senior, junior, and sophomore teams competed against each other in a race for championship titles. The tournament was the topic of much conversation among the female enthusiasts.

Individual Block M awards were presented to girls who fulfilled ten or more weeks of participation in after school sports. Graduating seniors received gold pins, signifying that they were members of the GEB for three years. As it does each term, the GEB held its regular initiation exercises. Dressing would-be members in old clothes, and giving them hairdo and makeup creations that made the male aggregation shudder, was the Board's way of saying "Welcome!" to some twenty or more new members.

the face of mission

Handwritten purple ink notes at the bottom of the page:
 I am proud to be a member of the Mission team.
 I am proud to be a member of the Mission team.
 I am proud to be a member of the Mission team.
 I am proud to be a member of the Mission team.

JOB

You'll like working for the telephone company. Year after year, hundreds of young women find good jobs in this expanding business.

The good fellowship of telephone people, their pride in their work—good pay right from the start while you learn—opportunity to advance in interesting work—these are some of the reasons why the telephone company is a good place to work.

Many of your former schoolmates are here. Come in and talk over the advantages of telephone work for you.

and I still think you are swell.

You have made

U.S. a pleasure

(what do you think of that line he?)

See you next term

Jan Castellucci

Dear Paul -
We've all had a lot of fun in per. and out at Sam. I hope to see a lot of you during the summer, and maybe we can hitch some more rides together. Here's wishing a lot of luck to the cutest guy in

Dear Honey (Paul)

I am sorry about the prom Paul honest, but I heard you had asked Delia to go so I didn't answer you and the answer was "yes" ugly, but maybe we can make that up at our senior prom.

OK. So a wonderful boy I wish you all the luck in the world. How about us getting together next term dear. See you next term.

Love as ever Joyce Montley.

P.S.

Leave some of the girl alone this summer, but
