We are now at the conclusion of another school year. Nearly ten months ago all of us had goals we wanted to achieve. Now we must reconsider and evaluate our accomplishments: what did we achieve, and more importantly: where are we headed?

During the past year, our goal in student government has been the establishment of greater school unity and greater student responsibility. Like many worth-while, far-reaching plans, ours has not been fully realized as yet. We have, however, made notable progress, leaving a sound foundation on which future student governments can build.

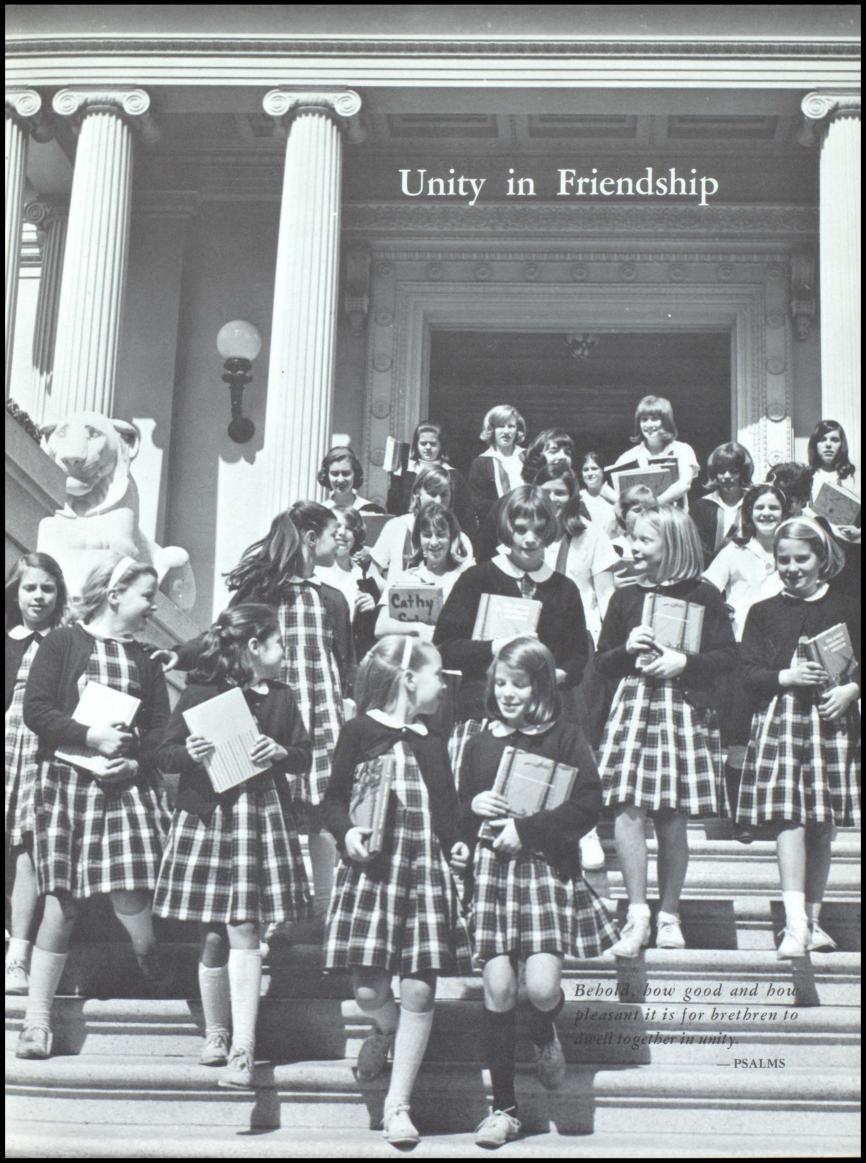

Now the question remains: where are we headed?

For the seniors the answer is relatively simple — college. For you who remain at Hamlin's, however, the answer is not quite so simple. There are new ideas to be explored, new interests to be stimulated, decisions to be made and further goals to be attained.

Our progress up to now has been but a beginning, to be continued by you. And so we depart, bestowing upon you the duties and responsibilities of leadership.

We who leave you today wish you success in the future.

All students are members of the Student Government. They are represented by our Student Council, which consists of all student body officers. It meets every month with our principal and the faculty advisers to discuss problems, evaluate suggestions, and make decisions affecting the school community.

A smaller but equally influential body is the Executive Committee, composed of high school class presidents and the student body president. It is chiefly concerned with the improvement of the upper school.

The Student Government agreed that the students, as a whole, did not participate sufficiently in the making of school policies and rules. A system of regular gatherings, patterned after New England town meetings, was initiated with great success.

As part of our Honor System, the Student Council has this year revived the policy of having all study halls proctored by seniors. This is a significant step forward in giving all students at Hamlin's increased responsibility.

One of the greatest achievements of the year has been the creation of the High School and Middle School Library Committees. They have spent many hours discarding, organizing, shelving and covering books. New acquisitions, selected by the various academic departments, and donations from interested parents have increased the size and scope of both libraries, and are proving to be valuable sources of information and entertainment.

LEO — Sue Joseph

LEO and LEONA are Hamlin's rival athletic teams, named after the granite lions which guard the entrance to Stanwood Hall. The teams compete throughout the year for the coveted winner's plaque; the enthusiasm generated by the contests is a great boost to school morale.

Since Hamlin's is a member of the Northern California Girls' Tennis Association, our team members have the opportunity to participate in extramural matches, develop a sense of keen sportsmanship, and gain experience in competition.

The Ancient Order of Loyal Descendants are a living example of traditionand loyalty at Hamlin's. Members of this group are daughters or granddaughters of Hamlin's alumnae.

the christmas pageant . . .

... is the most cherished of all Hamlin's traditions. Each December the entire school joins to present a pageant celebrating the birth of Christ. The off-stage singing of the Glee Club accompanies the processional, and the ceremony ends with a Nativity scene, and with the reading of the Christmas story from the balcony of Stanwood Hall.

This Lower School party, which replaced the Epilogue Fair this year, was a rousing success. Students modeled costumes, took part in the many games, and the Eighth Grade presented a greatly applauded play. This was another "first" which we hope to turn into a lasting Hamlin's tradition.

Only if people are united can they hope to achieve success. Only if an individual knows and understands herself, can she adjust to the unified society in which we live. This, not only in theory, but in fact, is the goal of the Hamlin school — to prepare us for the future years.
